THE GREEK ORIGINALS AND DATES OF THE PLAYS IN THE THIRD VOLUME

THE Mercator is an adaptation of Philemon's Emporos.¹ When the Emporos was produced, however, is unknown, as is the date of production of the Mercator, and of the Mostellaria and Persa, as well.

The Alazon, the Greek original of the Miles Gloriosus, was very likely written in 287 B.C., the argument² for that date being based on international relations during the reign of Seleucus,³ for whom Pyrgopolynices was recruiting soldiers at Ephesus. And Periplectomenus's allusion to the imprisonment of Naevius⁴ might seem to suggest that Plautus composed the Miles about 206 B.C.

Philemon's Phasma was probably the original of the Mostellaria, and written, as it apparently was, after the death of Alexander the Great and Agathocles,⁵ we may assume that Philemon presented the Phasma between 288 B.C. and the year of the death of Diphilus,⁶ who was living when it was produced.

² Hueffner, De Plauti Comoediarum Exemplis Atticis, 28, 29.

³ Miles 75, 948, 949. ⁴ Miles 211.

⁵ Most. 77. ⁶ Most. 1149.

THE GREEK ORIGINALS

In the Persæ the Persians are spoken of as a people still independent.¹ The unknown Greek original of the play would therefore seem to have been written in the time of Demosthenes, before the conquests of Alexander.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY (I)

A young man, sent on a trading trip by his father, buys and brings home a charming young miss. The old gentleman, after seeing her, inquires who she may be. His son's servant pretends that she was bought as an attendant for the young man's mother. Falling in love with her and feigning to sell her, the old gentleman entrusts her to a neighbour; and the neighbour's wife thinks he has got himself a mistress. Then Charinus is kept from leaving the country by his friend, who has found the young fellow's sweetheart.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY (II)

A dissipated son is packed off on a trading trip by his father. Despatched abroad, he loses his heart to a maidservant of his host, buys her, and carries her home. He disembarks; his father flies to the ship, and, at first sight of the maid, is smitten. He asks whose she is; his son's servant says the young man bought her as an attendant for his mother. Then the old gentle-

The old gentleman is first in the market and gets the girl. This neighbour's spouse, finding the girl in her house, takes her for her husband's mistress, and ejects him. ACT I

ENTER Charinus, PALE AND WAN.

Char. (to audience) I am now resolved to do, at one and the same time, two things—acquaint you both with the plot of this play and with my passion. I shall not imitate those other lovesick lovers I have seen in the comedies, who confide their woes to the night, or day, or sun, or moon; very little care these, I fancy, about the complaints of mortals, their likes and dislikes. It is to you, rather, that I shall now confide my woes.

The Greek name of this play is the Emporos, of Philemon; in Latin we call it the Mercator, of Maccius Titus.

My father (with a wave of the hand in the direction of Demipho's house) sent me away from here on a trading trip to Rhodes; two years ago it is now, since I left home. There I fell in love with a perfectly beautiful girl. But how I became enthralled you shall hear, if your ears are at leisure and you will accord me your kind attention. (apologetically) And, by Jove, I have failed to follow fully the practice of lovers: this love of mine was the theme I announced, that was my starting point. For in the wake of love commonly come all these ills—care, sorrow and excessive display,¹ and overtalking—which overtalking becomes undertalking because ■ lover constantly delivers himself of useless irrelevancies at the wrong time; and then again I pronounce this overtalking sub-talking, by reason of the fact that no lover is ever so artfully eloquent as to be able to say the things that help him. So you people should not be irritated at my own overtalking now: it was my legacy from Venus on the same day she gave me my love. To which love of mine I must now return, and resume my tale.

In the beginning, after I had come of age and lost my zest for childish things, I became completely captivated by a courtesan here; forthwith my father's property quietly went into exile to her. The ruthless pimp, who owned the girl, grabbed and made off with everything he could pounce on. My father denounced all this night and day, picturing the perfidy and injustice of pimps. To think that his own estate should be absolutely mangled, and that fellow's multiplied! All this at the top of his lungs; or now again he would mutter what he had to say—shake his head, and even insist that I was no son of his. All over the city he would go, bebawling and giving notice no one was to trust me when I looked for loans. Love had lured many ■■■ into extravagance, he would tell me; but I was an intemperate, unrestrained, unprincipled waster, doing all I could to drain him dry; and the good substance he had acquired by his own unsparing toil was being scattered and squandered by me in the vilest way, on my amours. To think that he had supported me all these years to be ■ scandal to him! If I was not ashamed of such a life, I ought to end my life, and do it gladly. Why, here was he—he had not turned to love affairs and lolling about in idleness like me the moment he came of age, nor did he have a chance—so tightly was he held in check by his father. Work on the farm, dirty work and plenty of it, that was his training, and there was no visiting the city for him, except once every four years,¹ and just as soon as he had set eyes on the sacred robe² his father used to pack him off post haste to the farm again. And there he was the best labourer of them all by far, and his father would say: “It is for yourself you plough, for yourself you harrow, for yourself you sow, yes, and for yourself you reap, and for yourself, finally, that labour will engender joy.” After life had left his father’s body, he had sold the farm and with the money bought a ship of fifteen tons burden and marketed his cargoes of merchandise everywhere, till he had at length acquired the wealth which he then possessed. ■ ought to do the same, if I were what I ought to be.

to my own father and disgusting to the man I should delight, lovesick lunatic though I was, I summoned my resolution and declared that I would go on a trading trip, if he so desired: my love should be put aside if only I could please him. He thanked me and be-lauded my good intentions; but he did not fail to follow up my promises. He built a small Cyprian bark, bought merchandise, loaded the now completed vessel, and furthermore counted me out two hundred pounds with his own hand. A slave who had been my attendant in time past, when I was a tiny lad, he sent along with me as a sort of guardian. These preparations made, we weighed anchor.

- We arrived at Rhodes, where I sold my whole cargo quite to my satisfaction. I made a big profit over and above the price my father set for me on the merchandise; so I cleared a good bit of pocket-money for myself. But while I was strolling about the port there, an old friend of ours recognized me and invited me to dinner. I went, and met with a jovial and lavish welcome at his table. On our going to bed at night, lo and behold! a girl came to me, an unsurpassed beauty of a girl! That night she spent with me by order of my host. See for yourselves how completely she charmed me: the next day I went to my host and begged him to sell her to me, saying I should be grateful and deeply obliged for the favour.

To come to an end—I did buy her, and brought her here yesterday. But I don't want my father to find out I have brought her. I just now left her at the harbour on board the ship, along with

- Char. Be damned to you!
- Acan. (vehemently) To you, as a matter of fact, (more calmly) I'm reporting this news from the port——
- Char. (on edge) What are you bringing me? Speak!
- Acan. Violence and dread, anguish and apprehension, wrangling and want.
- Char. Lord help me! Why, man, this is a perfect mine of trouble you've brought me! I'm a ruin!
- Acan. Oh, no, you're a—— (glowers)
- Char. Yes, yes, I know—a poor wretch, you're going to say.
- Acan. I said it—silently.
- Char. What is this trouble?
- Acan. Don't keep asking; it's a horrible misfortune.
- Char. For Heaven's sake, do relieve me now! I've been hanging in suspense too long!
- Acan. (judicially) Gently, gently! There are still many things I wish to inquire into before the thrashing I—get.
- Char. By gad, you shall be thrashed, ■ promise you, unless you instantly speak out, or get out!
- Acan. (pleasantly) Just see that! How he does pat a fellow! None smother, once he gets going!
- Char. (pleadingly again) I beg and beseech you, do, do let me know this minute what the trouble is,

Acan. Because we were busy with our own business: we were intent on furling sail and getting things shipshape. Meanwhile, up comes your father in ■ tiny cutter, and not a soul set eyes on him till he climbed aboard.

Char. (tragically) In vain, oh sea, have I escaped thy tempests! Methought I now was surely safe on shore, only to find myself flung upon the rocks by the raging billows! Go on, go on, tell what took place!

Acan. After he spied the girl, he began asking whose she was.

Char. (in despair) What shall I do? I don't believe my father will believe me, if I say I bought her for my mother; besides, (virtuously) I think it's wicked to tell a lie to my own parent. He won't believe it, and it can't be believed, that I bought such an exquisite creature to be my mother's maid.

Acan. Do keep still, won't you, you idiot? He'll believe you, Lord, yes! Why, he has already believed me.

Char. Oh dear! How I dread his coming to suspect the real situation! Answer me this question, please, please!

Acan. No, but he did.

Char. Oh, Lord help me! It's all over! But why am I wailing my life away here, and not going to the ship? (to Acapthio) Come along! (sets off down the street).

Acan. If you go that way, you'll come plump and pat on your father. Then he'll observe that you're nervous and all upset: the next thing he'll detain you, demand where you bought her, how much you bought her for—cross-examine you while you're excited.

ACT II

ENTER Demipho, PERPLEXED.

Dem. The Gods do make sport of us mortals in amazing ways! And amazing dreams they do send us in our sleep! Myself, for instance, just this past night—how I was hustled and bustled in my sleep! I seemed to have bought a beautiful she-goat. So that she might not be harmed by another she-goat I already had at home, and that they might not fall foul of each other if they were both in the same place, it seemed that after buying her I committed her to the care of a monkey.

Well, not long afterwards this monkey came over and heaped curses and abuse upon me: he said that, thanks to that she-goat and her arrival, he had let himself in for no end of disgrace and loss; that she-goat I had given him to keep for me, he maintained, had completely devoured his wife's dowry. It seemed to me amazing that that one she-goat should devour the dowry of a monkey's wife. But the monkey insisted she had, and this was his ultimatum—that unless I took her away from his house at once, he would take her into my own house to my wife.

And there I was, by Jove, seeming to have the tenderest sort of feeling for that she-goat, but without a soul to shelter her—which made my anguish, and anxiety as to what to do, all the greater, poor wretch! Meanwhile ■ kid, ■ it seemed, came up to me with the announcement that he had taken that she-goat away from the monkey, and began to laugh at me—for I was weeping and wailing at her abduction.

Now what this dream portends, I can't discover, except that, as to that she-goat, I suspect, I've already discovered what she is, or signified. For I went down to the harbour this morning at day-break; after transacting the business I had in hand I suddenly spied the ship that brought my son from Rhodes yesterday, and for some unknown reason took a notion to go and look it over. Clambering into a boat, I was carried to the ship. And then (rapturously) I beheld ■ girl, a perfect beauty of a girl, brought here by my son to be his mother's maid! The minute I set eyes on her I fell in love—not as sane men do, but like a madman. Lord, Lord! I've been in love before, of course, when I was young, but never in any such mad way as this. Oh, Lord! One thing I do know now at any rate—it's all over with me! Oh well, see for yourselves what I am good for!

Now this is surely the way of it—the girl is that she-goat; but that monkey and kid, by Jove, are bringing me trouble, and who to say they are I don't know. (listening) But I must hush, for there's my neighbour coming out!

Scene 3. ENTER CHARINUS, MUCH DEPRESSED.

Char. (not seeing his father) There's no more miserable man alive than I am, I do believe, or one with more things eternally going against him. Isn't it a fact that nothing that I've set about can turn out for me and stay as I long to have it? Some confounded thing or other does always drop on me and botch my best laid plans! Here I had got myself the mistress that suited me, poor devil, and carried her off for cash, thinking I could have her unbeknown to my father. And now he has discovered it, and seen her, and done for me! And I haven't thought what to say when he questions me, what with the ten minds inside me all in confusion and conflict! What course to take now I can't conceive, I'm so worried and perplexed. At times my servant's plan suits me thoroughly; then again it doesn't suit me, and it seems impossible my father can be induced to think that such a girl was bought to be my mother's maid.

But supposing now I tell him how it really is and announce that I bought her for myself, what would he think of me? And as for her, why, he'd tear her away, transport her across the sea for sale! I know how harsh he is, and not from hearsay. So this is a lover's life? (bitterly) I'd prefer a ploughman's life to such a lover's life as this! He has already turned me out of his house once against my will, ordered me off on a trading trip. That's what got me into this mess! For what pleasure is there in a thing that brings you more grief than gratification? It was all for nothing I kept her close, concealed, under cover: my father's a regular fly—you can't keep anything from him,

Lys. Quid ais tu ? iam bienniumst, quom tecum rem habet ?

Pas. Certo;

ego cum viro et ille cum muliere, nisi cum illo aut ille mecum, neuter stupri causa caput limaret.

Lys. Di immortales,

MERCATOR

Pas. I'll show my appreciation and be grateful for anything that's given me, sir.

Lys. Now then, my girl, not to deceive you—you're not mine, don't think you are.

Pas. Mercy me! Whose ~~am~~ I, then?

Lys. You've been bought again for your own master. I did the buying, at his request.

Pas. (thinking he means Charinus) Oh, I'm alive once more, if he keeps his word with me!

Lys. Cheer up! He'll set you free, he will! Why, good Lord, he's dying for you, and to-day's the first time he ever saw you!

Pas. Oh, sir, it's two years now since he began relations with me. I'll let you into our secret, now that I know you're a friend of his.

Lys. (astonished) What's that? Two years now he's had relations with you?

Pas. Why, yes. And we promised each other solemnly, I him and he me, never to have a thing to do with any man or woman except our own two selves.

Lys. Ye immortal gods! Won't he sleep with his own wife, even?

Pas. (with a start) Oh, my dear man, he isn't married? (defiantly) He's not, and he won't be, either!

Lys. Well, I wish he weren't! Lord, Lord, how he did lie!

Pas. There's no young ~~man~~ alive that I love more.

Lys. (quizzically) He's a boy, a boy, silly! Really, you know, it's not long ago that his teeth dropped out.

Pas. (mystified) What's that about his teeth?

Lys. Oh, nothing. (going towards his house) This way, please. He begged me to put you up for this one day, my wife being in the country.

MERCATOR

Scene 2. ENTER Demipho IN HIGH SPIRITS.

Dem. At last I've claimed the privilege of going to the dogs! Here's ■ mistress bought, unbeknown to wife, unbeknown to son! I'll take up my old ways again, I certainly will, and be good to myself. Only ■ short space of life is left me, I'll sweeten it with pleasure and wine and love. Why, my age is just the proper season to have my fling. When you're young and your blood's fresh, that's the time to settle down to making your fortune; and then at last when you're old, why, that's the time to take your ease and enjoy your love affairs, while you can. For then each day of life is clear profit.

Now I propose to practise what I preach. Meanwhile, however, I'll just look in at home here: my wife has been hungrily awaiting me there this long while. (reflecting) Her tongue will do me to death in no time, once I'm back inside. (belligerently) But just the same, I tell you what, by Jove, for all that I'm—— (weakly) not going in. No, I'll see my neighbour here before I go back home; I want him to hire some house for me, for that girl to live in. (a noise at Lysimachus's door) Aha! There he is, coming out!

Scene 3. ENTER Lysimachus.

Lys. (to Pasicompsa within) I'll bring him to you directly, if I come across him.

Dem. (aside) He means me.

Lys. (seeing him) I say, Demipho——

Dem. (tempestuously) Is the girl inside there?

Lys. (thoughtful) Well, what do you think?

Dem. (blithely) What if I have ■ look? (makes toward the door)

- Lys.* What's your hurry? Wait.
- Dem.* (halts) What shall I do?
- Lys.* You would do well to consider what you ought to do.
- Dem.* What is there to consider? Lord, — I certainly take it that what I ought to do is to (all a-quiver) go inside there! (makes for door again)
- Lys.* (scornfully) Do you, really? You old wether! Go inside, eh?
- Dem.* (halting again, puzzled) What else should I do?
- Lys.* Look here now and listen to me, first: there's still something I think you should do first. Why, if you go inside there now, you'll want to hug and palaver and kiss.
- Dem.* (ecstatically) Well, if you haven't got my mind in your body! You know just what I intend to do!
- Lys.* You'll be doing the wrong thing.
- Dem.* (indignant) When you love a girl, can't you——
- Lys.* All the worse. Is a foul-breathed old goat like you to kiss a girl (emphatically) on an empty stomach? D'ye want to turn her stomach the moment you come near her? Gad! I see what a lover you are when you announce such intentions!
- Dem.* (crestfallen, then hopefully) Well, what if I attend to this then? If you think best, let's capture some cook to cook up a meal here at your house against the evening.
- Lys.* (his hopes realized) There! I do think that best. Now you're talking in a wise and loverly way.
- Dem.* (impatient) Well, why stand here? Let's go, then, and see to our marketing, and make a beautiful day of it. (going)
- Lys.* Yes, yes, I'm with you! (trying to catch up, and pulling at Demipho's cloak) And I say, you'll find quarters for her, if you're wise. I say, she can't

Dem. That's all arranged! Come along! ■ [EXEUNT.

Scene 4. ENTER Charinus, MUCH WROUGHT UP.

Char. Oh, I'm miserable! I can't be comfortable anywhere! If I'm at home, my thoughts are out; and if I'm out, my thoughts are at home! Such flames of love as my heart and breast are in! If it weren't for the protection of my tears, I do believe my head would be ablaze by now. (sublimely) My hope is all I cling to; my life I've allowed to go—whether to return or no, I know not! If my father crushes me by doing what he said, my life has left for exile; but if my chum has fulfilled his promise, my life is left for me. (pauses, then petulantly) But even if Eutychus had the gout, he could have got back from the harbour by this time. That's ■ terrible failing of his—being so awfully slow, in comparison with my heart's desire. (looking down the street) But is that he, that man I see running? It is, it is! I'll go meet him! Oh, he's stopping! Now I'm lost, lost! I don't like that look of his at all! That slow step! That gloomy air! Oh, my heart's on fire! I'm caught! He's shaking his head! (calling) Oh, Eutychus!

ENTER Eutychus.

Eut. (dejectedly) Oh, you Charinus!

Char. (beside himself) Before you get your breath—just one word, out with it! Where am I? Here, or with the dead?

Eut. Neither with the dead, nor here.

Eut. Nowhere at all.

Char. Oh, damnation! Those words have killed me!

Eut. Too much talk in time of action does make words wearisome.

Char. Whatever it is, come to the main points!

Eut. First of all—we're done for.

Char. (bitterly)• Why don't you tell me some news I don't know, instead?

Eut. The girl has been taken away from you.

Char. (tragic) Eutychus, you are committing a capital crime!

Eut. Eh? How so!

Char. I am your comrade and your chum, a free born citizen, and now you murder me!

Eut. Heaven forbid!

Char. You have thrust a sword into my throat! Ere long I'll fall!

Eut. Now, now, for heaven's sake, don't lose courage!

Char. I have none to lose! Tell me more, more of my misery! For whom was she bought?

Eut. I don't know. She had already been auctioned off and taken away when I reached the harbour.

Char. Oh my God! Man, man, all this time you've been hurling whole mountains of red-hot misery

Eut. God knows it's no fault of mine!

Char. (savagely) Bravo! Calling God to witness, when He's not here! How can I believe your words?

Eut. Because your beliefs are in your own control, as my words are in mine.

Char. You're ready enough in repartee, but in carrying out commissions you're a lame, blind, mute, maimed remnant of a man! You promised to bamboozle my father—and I, I believed I had left the matter to an intelligent human being, only to find I left it to a great big block of stone!

Eut. (patiently) What could I do?

Char. What could you do? You ask me that? You could have investigated, inquired who he was or where he came from, who his family were, whether he was a citizen or an alien!

Eut. They said he was an Athenian citizen.

Char. You might at least have found out where he lived, if not his name.

Eut. I've been just as much harassed as you are by it, I certainly have.

Char. Tell me, who bought her?

Eut. Upon my soul, I don't know.

Char. Look at that! Is that the way to help a good friend?

Eut. What do you want me to do?

Char. The same thing you are doing—die! Why didn't you ask what the man who bought her looked like, and see if she could be traced that way? Oh dear, oh dear!

Eut. Do stop crying—the thing you do do at present!

MERCATOR

Eut. No one seemed to know.

Char. But at least you might have inquired about his appearance!

Eut. I did.

Char. Well, then, what did they say he looked like?

Eut. I'll tell you—a gray-haired, knock-kneed, pot-bellied, big-mouthed, stubby fellow, with blackish eyes, lantern jaws, and feet a bit splayed.

Char. That's no description of a man, it's some collection of freaks! Can't you tell me anything else about him?

Eut. That's all, so far as I know.

Char. Lord, Lord! He has done anything but light my life with his lantern jaws! (in another tragic flight) Oh, I can't endure it! My mind's made up, I'll hence into exile! (pauses) But let me consider what country I had best choose—Megara . . . Eretria . . . Corinth . . . Chalcis . . . Crete . . . Cyprus . . . Sicily . . . Cnidus . . . Zacynthus . . . Lesbos . . . Boeotia!

Eut. What makes you think of taking such a step as that?

Char. Ah, because I suffer so from love!

Eut. But see here! When you reach the place you're about to go to, suppose love happens to overtake you there, and you still can't gratify it, will you then proceed to fly that place, too, and the next place—well, if the same thing happens again? Really now, what end will there be to your exile, what finish to your flight? What land or home can you ever call your own? Answer me that. Look now, if you leave this city, do you think you'll leave your love behind you here? If you're Eut. I have.

Char. You have talked in vain. This is my fixed intention. I shall go home to pay my respects to my father and mother, and then without my father's knowledge I shall flee this country, or (darkly) settle upon some plan!

[EXIT PRECIPITATELY INTO HOUSE.]

Eut. (looking after him) Well, that was a sudden start and exit! This is awful! Why, if he leaves home, everyone will say it came of my being such a slacker. (after a moment's thought) I'll do it, I'll hire all the public criers I can get to follow her up and find her! Next I'll pounce on the praetor and beg him to furnish me officers to search every quarter of the city. Yes, yes, that's the only resource left me now, I see! [EXIT.]

ACT IV

ENTER Dorippa, IRATE.

Dor. Having got word at the farm from my husband that he didn't intend to go out there, I've acted upon my womanly instinct and come back, to pursue the man that flees me. Dor. (glancing at the altar in front of Demipho's house) Give me something for ■ offering on our neighbour's altar here. (as Syra fumbles at her parcels) Yes, yes, let me have this laurel branch. (taking it) You go on in.

Syr. Yes, ma'am. [EXIT.

Dor. (at the altar) Apollo, I beseech thee, graciously grant thy favour, and safety and sound health, to our family, and may'st thou spare my son with thy gracious favour.

RE-ENTER Syra IN CONSTERNATION.

Syr. Oh, Lord, help us, Lord pity us! Oh, oh, this is terrible!

Dor. For heaven's sake, are you in your senses? What are you shrieking about?

Syr. Oh, Dorippa, my poor Dorippa!

Dor. For heaven's sake, what are you howling about?

Syr. There's some strange woman in the house here, ma'am!

Dor. (startled) What? A woman?

Syr. A hussy!

Dor. Goodness me, indeed I will, just as fast as I can go!
[EXEUNT INTO HOUSE.]

Scene 2. ENTER Lysimachus, OUT OF TEMPER.

Lys. Isn't it bad enough for Demipho to be in love, without his being so extravagant, to boot? Why, if he'd invited a dozen dignitaries to dinner, the food he bought would be excessive. But the way he kept exhorting the cooks, just as a coxswain does his crew! I hired a cook myself. (looking about) But I wonder why he doesn't come, I told him. (listening) But who can that be coming out of our house? The door's opening. (withdraws)

Scene 3. ENTER Dorippa MUCH AGITATED.

Dor. Oh, there'll never be, never was, a more wretched woman than I am, to be married to such a man! Oh, dear me, dear me! Just see to what a husband you may entrust yourself and all you own! Just see to what a man I brought two thousand pounds in dowry, only to witness such sights, to suffer such insults!

Lys. (aside) Ye gods, I'm in for it! My wife's back from the farm already! I'll bet she saw that girl in the house! But I can't catch what she says from here. I'll get closer. (does so)

Dor. Oh, heaven help me!

Dor. I'm lost, lost!

Lys. (aside) Oh Lord! I'm the one that's lost and lost for good, confound it! She has seen her. May all the powers above ~~be~~ ~~in~~ you, Demipho!

Dor. Yes, indeed! This is the ~~reason~~ why my husband didn't want to go to the farm.

Lys. (aside) What can I do now but step up and speak to her? (approaching and addressing her with playful courtliness) Greetings from your husband to his wife, my dear! Have our rustics become city folk?

Dor. (hotly) They act with more decency than those who have not become rustics.

Lys. Our own rustics haven't misbehaved, have they?

Dor. Less than our city folk, mercy me, yes! And they do much less looking for trouble!

Lys. Well, well, but how have the city folk misbehaved? Tell me. By Jove, I'm eager to know.

Dor. You're simply sounding me, and you know it. (viciously) Whose woman is that inside there?

Lys. (tentatively) You . . . saw her, eh?

Dor. I did.

Lys. And you . . . ask whose she is?

Dor. (turning away indignantly) I shall discover, just the same!

Lys. You want me to . . . say whose she is? She . . . by Jove, she . . . (aside) Damnation! I don't know what to say!

Dor. You're stuck!

Lys. (aside) I never saw a ~~man~~ more so!

Dor. Well, why don't you say?

Lys. Well, if I only had a chance—

Dor. You should have said it already.

Lys. (desperate) I can't, the way you keep at me; you hound me as if I were guilty!

Dor. (ironically) Oh, of course, you're not guilty!

Lys. You can say that with absolute assurance.

Lys. I will say.
Dor. But say it as it should be said, though.

Dor. What trifling! I've caught you red-handed in your guilt!
Lys. What guilt? Really now, that girl is . . . the girl that—
Dor. What girl?
Lys. The girl . . .
Dor. Whose girl?
Lys. (badly flustered) Now— (on a new tack) if it weren't necessary, I shouldn't tell you at present.
Dor. You don't know who the girl is?
Lys. (suddenly illumined) Oh yes, now I know: I was made an arbitrator in her case.
Dor. An arbitrator? (drily) Now I know, too: so you've summoned her for a conference with you.
Lys. No, no, it's this way—she was left with me for safe-keeping.
Dor. (witheringly) I understand!
Lys. I swear it's nothing of that sort at all!
Dor. You absolve yourself too soon.
Lys. (aside) This is more than I can manage! I am stuck, to be sure!

Scene 4. ENTER A COOK, HIS ASSISTANTS FOLLOWING AT A DISTANCE AND STAGGERING UNDER BASKETS OF PROVISIONS.

- Cook (calling to assistants) Come, step along, stir yourselves! I've got to get up a dinner for an old gallant. On second thoughts, though, it's to be got up for ourselves, not for the chap that hired us. For if a lover has the girl he loves, he has his food—looking, caressing, kissing, chatting.

Lys. (seeing them) Damnation! Will you look at that! Here's the cook!

Cook (cheerfully) We've got here, sir.

Lys. (in a low tone) Get out!

Cook What? Get out?

Lys. Sh-h! Get out!

Cook Get out?

Lys. Get out!

Cook You're not to have a dinner?

Lys. We've had our fill already.

Cook But—

Lys. Oh, this is dreadful!

Dor. See here, sir! Is all this (indicating provisions) brought you, too, by order of the parties you were made arbitrator for?

Cook (to Lysimachus) Is this your lady friend you told me you were in love with, a while ago when you were marketing?

Lys. (in agony) Shut up, can't you? (Dorippa comes closer) ■

Cook ■ A rather well-made wench, too! (confidentially) But, my word, she is annuating!

Lys. Get to the devil out of here, will you?

Cook (soothingly) She's not bad.

Lys. But you are!

Cook By gad, I'll bet she makes a fine bedfellow!

Lys. Oh, won't you get out? I'm not the man that hired you a while ago!

Cook Eh? What? None of that! By gad, you're the one, all right.

Lys. (aside) Oh, Lord help me!
Cook (very distinctly) Your wife's in the country, of course; I remember your saying a while ago you hated her like a snake.

Lys. I? I said that to you?

Cook Yes, to me, by gad.

Lys. (to Dorippa, solemnly) So help me Heaven, my dear, I never said any such thing!

Dor. (icily) You really deny it? It's perfectly plain that you do hate me.

Lys. I deny it, I tell you!

Cook (to Dorippa in apparent guilelessness) No, no, ma'am, he didn't say he hated you, but his wife; and he said she was in the country.

Lys. (desperately) This lady is my wife. What makes you pester me?

Cook Because you deny knowing me—but perhaps you're afraid of her.

Lys. (to Dorippa, placatingly) Which is wise of me, for she's my one and only.

Cook D'ye want to try me?

Lys. (angrily) I do not!

Cook Give me my pay.

Lys. Come for it to-morrow; you'll get it. And now get out!

Dor. (in tears) Oh dear me, dear me!

Lys. (aside) I'm proving the truth of that old proverb now: "A bad neighbour brings bad luck."

Cook (to attendants) Why stand here? Come on, let's go. (to Lysimachus, sweetly) If any harm has happened, it's no fault of mine.

Lys. (forlorn) Oh, damn it, man, you're eradicating me!

Cook (ingenuously) Now I know what you want: why, of course, you want me to get out.

Lys. (after a painful silence) Perhaps you're . . . surprised at that . . . cook's coming with all this . . . stuff. I'll . . . tell you . . . how it is.

Dor. No extravagance or enormity of yours, sir, surprises me. Good heavens! I won't endure such a dreadful married life, and have sluts introduced into my own house in such a fashion! (calling at the door) Syra! Go to my father and ask him in my name to come to me with you at once.

Syr. Where mistress sent me, to her father—he's not at home: they said he'd gone to the country. So now I'm back to tell her.

Eut. I'm all tired out with searching the whole city; and not a single trace of that girl can I find. (glancing towards his house) But my mother's back from the country, for I see Syra standing in front of the house. (calling) Syra!

Syr. (without looking) Who's calling me?

Eut. The master that you nursed.

Syr. Oh, bless your heart, my dear child!

Eut. Good heavens! I never supposed my father — that sort? Is the woman still inside?

Syr. She is.

Eut. (hurrying to the door) Come along!

[EXIT INTO HOUSE.]

Scene 6.

Syr. My, my! Women do live under hard conditions, so much more unfair, poor things, than the men's. Why, if a husband has brought home some strumpet, unbeknown to his wife, and she finds it out, the husband goes scot free. But once a wife steps out of the house unbeknown to her husband, he has his grounds and she's divorced. Oh, I wish there was the same rule for the husband as for the wife! Now a wife, ■ good wife, is content with just her husband; why should a husband be less content with just his wife? Mercy me, if husbands, too, were taken to task for wenching on the sly, the same way as wanton wives are divorced, I warrant there'd be more lone men about than there now are women! Char. Tell me now, then! Where is she?

Eut. (after prolonging the suspense) In . . . our house.

Char. (ecstatic) Oh, excellent house, if you speak true!
Exquisitely constructed, I consider! But how can I believe that? Did you see her, or is your news mere hearsay?

Eut. Tempus non est intro eundi.

Char. Enicas.

Eut. Non opus est, inquam, nunc intro te ire.

MERCATOR

Eut. I saw her, myself.

Char. Who took her to your people?

Eut. A very unfair question! What does it matter to you who came with her?

Char. Provided she's there! (anxiously) You're telling the truth?

Eut. Charinus, you haven't the vestige of a sense of shame. Of course she's there.

Char. Then in return for this news, ask for anything you like!

Eut. What if I do ask for it?

Char. (laughing hysterically) Well, pray God you'll get it!

Eut. (tolerantly) Wag!

Char. Only let me set eyes on her, and all's well! But I must get out of this rig! (shouting at his door) Hey, someone! Come out here, quick, and bring me a mantle! (strips off his travelling coat)

Eut. There! Now you suit me.

ENTER A SLAVE WITH MANTLE.

Char. Just in time, my lad! Here, catch this coat (passing it over with his sword and luggage, and putting on the mantle) and stay right where you are, so that (glaring at Eutychus and relapsing into melodrama) if this news be false, I may continue and complete the journey I had begun!

Eut. You don't believe me?

Char. (suspiciously) I believe all you tell me, oh, of course. But why don't you take me in to see her?

Eut. (embarrassed) Do wait a little while.

Char. Why wait?

Eut. This isn't the right moment to go in.

Char. You're killing me!

Eut. It's not advisable for you to go in just now, I tell you.

MERCATOR

Char. For what reason? Answer me!

Eut. There's no time for it.

Char. Why?

Eut. Because it's not convenient for her.

Char. (indignant) So? Not convenient for her—the girl that loves me, the girl that I love, too? (pauses, then mildly, with a sly glance at Eutychus) A pretty dance this fellow leads me! The more fool I, to trust him! (turning to the slave) He delays me! I'll on with my cloak again! (removes his mantle).

Eut. Do wait ■ minute and listen to me!

Char. Here, boy, kindly take this mantle! (passes it over and dons his travelling cloak)

Eut. My mother's in a terrible rage at my father for having brought a wench into the house right before her face, while she was in the country. She suspects her of being his mistress.

Char. (taking articles from slave, one by one) Ah, my belt! (puts it on). •

Eut. And she's investigating the matter inside there now.

Char. (growing wilder) Now I have my sword in hand!

Eut. (alarmed) You see, if I should take you in—

Char. Aha! My flask! And now I go! (strides away)

Eut. (running after him) Wait, Charinus, wait!

Char. You miscalculate, you cannot deceive me!

Eut. Good heavens, no! Nor do I want to!

Char. Then why dost not permit me to continue on my journey?

Eut. (clutching him) I won't permit you!

Eut. (succumbing in his alarm for Charinus's sanity and going towards his door) Come on, follow me, and see the girl you're after!

Char. (hiding a smile) I have asked for her, but found her not!

Eut. I'll disregard my mother's anger now!

Char. I'll pursue my search still further! Now have I reached Chalcis! There I see a host of mine from Zacynthus; I tell him what has brought me thither, and inquire if he has heard it rumoured who carried her there and who possesses her.

Eut. (at his door) Why don't you drop that nonsense and step inside with me?

Char. My host replies that at Zacynthus they grow figs, not bad ones.

Eut. That's no lie.

Char. But as for my sweetheart, he affirms that rumours reached him, that she is (winking covertly at the audience) here in Athens!

Eut. I'll speak out, sirs. Attention, then, the two of you!

Dem. Yes, yes, we're both at your service!

Dem. That's true, what he says.

Lys. Well, you're the ~~man~~ he says it to.

Eut. (to Demipho) This makes it all the more true. Why, the impropriety in a man of your age to seize his son's sweetheart, when he's young, and loves her, and had bought her with his own money!

Nor is anyone hereafter to prevent his youthful son from having love affairs and mistresses, within due bounds. Such prevention shall cost him more privily than would open provision of the funds required. And furthermore, old men are to be subject to this law from this night on.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY (I)

A soldier carries off a courtesan from Athens to Ephesus. Her lover's servant, intending to bring this news to his master, who is abroad on an embassy, is himself captured at sea and given as a gift to that same soldier. Having summoned his master from Athens, he secretly opens a passage in the party wall of the two houses so that the lovers may be allowed to meet. The girl's guard sees them as he is roaming over the roof. But he is hoaxed and humbugged into believing her to be another girl. Palaestrio also induces the soldier to give up his mistress on the score that the wife of the old gentleman next door yearns to marry him. The soldier begs the girl to leave him voluntarily, and lavishes presents on her. Then he himself is caught in the old gentleman's house and comes in for punishment as an adulterer.

ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY (II)

A young Athenian and a free-born courtesan were madly in love with each other; but he left home on an embassy to Naupactus. A soldier falls in with the girl, and against her will carries her off to Ephesus. The Athenian's servant sets sail to inform his master of this fact; he is captured, however, and as a captive is presented to that same soldier. He writes to his master to ENTER Pyrgopolynices FROM HIS HOUSE, ATTENDED BY Artotrogus AND ORDERLIES, THE LATTER CARRYING A TREMENDOUS SHIELD.

Pyrgopolynices (to orderlies, as he struts back and forth, Artotrogus mimicking him at his heels) Mind ye make my buckler's sheen outshine the wonted radiance of the sun in cloudless sky, that, when 'tis needed in the fray, its rays may dazzle the array of foes that face me. (contemplating his sword) Verily would I comfort this blade of mine, lest he lament and pine at lingering idle by my side so long, when he doth long, poor lad, to slash to shreds our foemen. (halting) But whereabout here is Artotrogus?

Artotrogus (popping out from behind, with a covert wink at the orderlies) Here, sir, beside our hero bold and blest and of princely bearing! While as warrior—Mars would not presume to call himself your peer, or match his powers with yours.

Pyrg. (sublimely reminiscent) Who was the wight I succoured at Weevil Field; where the commander in chief was Battleboonski Mightimercenarimuddlekin, the grandson of Neptune?

Art. I remember, sir. •Of course you mean that one with the golden armour whose legions you puffed away with a breath, much as the wind does with leaves, or ■ thatch roof?

Pyrg. Oh, a mere nothing, that, really!

Pyrg. (with laborious unconcern) What did they say to you?

Art. They kept asking about you, sir. "Is he Achilles?" says one of 'em. "No, his brother," says I. "Goodness gracious! That's why he's such a fine, handsome gentleman," says the other one. "Just see what lovely hair he has. My! but the girls that cuddle him are lucky!"

Pyrg. (giving his cloak a rakish hitch) So they really said that, eh?

Art. Well, sir, didn't the both of them implore me to lead you past there to-day, just as if you were ■ parade?

Pyrg. (trying to yawn) It really is such an affliction to be so handsome.

70

Art. Yes, indeed, sir. The women are a nuisance, with their teasing, soliciting, exsupplicating me to let 'em see you, and sending for me so much that I can't attend to your affairs, sir.

Pyrg. (with an effort) Well, it seems to be time for us to go to the forum, so that I may pay the recruits whom I enlisted here yesterday. King Seleucus, you know, begged me most urgently to raise and enrol recruits for him. I have determined to devote this day to obliging the king.

Art. Come, then, sir, let us be going.

he who does not care to listen may arise and leave, so that there may be a seat for him who does. (pauses, with a glare ready for fugitives) Now as to the reason for your assembling in this place of mirth, I shall acquaint you with the plot and name of the comedy we are about to act. The Greek name of this comedy is Alazon, a word which we translate as Braggart. This town is Ephesus. That soldier who left here for the forum is my master, a bragging, brazen, stercoraceous fellow, full of lies and lechery. He says that all the women insist on running after him. The fact is, wherever he struts, he is the laughing-stock of them all. Why, the harlots here make such faces at him, that most of them, you can see, have bowlegged lips. (tries to laugh contagiously)

Now I have not been serving long in his service, myself; and I want you to know how I came to be his servant and left my former service. Attention, please, for now I begin with the plot.

I had a master at Athens, a splendid young gentleman. He was madly in love with a courtesan in Athens, Athens in Attica, and she with him—which is the sweetest kind of love affair to have. Now he was sent as a public commissioner to Naupactus on a matter of public importance. This soldier, meanwhile, chancing to come to Athens, wormed his way into an acquaintance with that mistress of my master, and began to wheedle her mother with his wine and gewgaws and costly catering, till he got to be on very good terms with the old bawd there. But the moment his chance came our soldier played a game on the bawd—the mother of the girl my master loved —by spiriting away her daughter, clapping her aboard ship, and carrying her off to Ephesus here against her will.

As for me, when I learned my master's mistress had been carried away from Athens, I got me ■ ship as fast as I knew how, and embarked to take the news to my master at Naupactus. Once out at sea, the gods saw fit for pirates to capture the ship that carried me. There I was, dished, before I had reached the master I was bound for!

My captor made this soldier a present of me. On being taken to his house by him, whom did I see but that sweetheart of master's who had been at Athens! When she spied me in front of her, she signalled me with her eyes not to speak her name; and then, when a chance came, she told me how unhappy she was, saying she longed to escape from this house to Athens, loving that man who had been my master at Athens as she did, and loathing no one worse than that soldier.

When I perceived how she felt, I got some tablets, sealed a letter, and gave it on the sly to a certain merchant to carry to that master of mine who had lived at Athens and loved her, so as to get him here. The message was not disregarded by him, for here he is, and in this house next door, too, (pointing) stopping with a friend of his father's, a delightful old gentleman, who is seconding his guest in his love affair and giving us every encouragement and help in word and deed. In consequence, I have got up a splendid scheme inside here for letting the lovers meet and be together. You see the soldier gave his girl one room in which no one but herself was to set foot, and I dug a hole through the wall of this room, so providing a secret passage for her from this house (pointing) into that one. And this with the old gentleman's knowledge—in fact, at his suggestion.

Now, the fellow-servant of mine that the soldier set on guard over the girl is no good at all. What with our clever hocus-pocus and canny flimflam, we shall throw dust in his eyes and make him fail to see what he does see. And just to keep you from confusion later on, this girl (pointing to the soldier's house) will soon take the parts of two girls, appearing as one from this house, and one from (pointing to the house of Periplectomenus) that—the same girl, mind you, but pretending to be another one. That is how her guard will be made game of. (listening and looking) But I hear a noise at our old neighbour's door! He is coming out, himself. (to audience) This is that delightful old gentleman I was speaking of. (steps aside)

Scene 2. ENTER Periplectomenus FROM HIS HOUSE.

Periplectomenus (to slaves within) By the Lord, if after this you don't break the legs of every outsider you see on our roof, I'll make rawhide of your ribs! The idea of my neighbours witnessing what goes on in my house by looking in through the skylight in that way! Now mark my words, all of you! Whoever you see from that soldier's house on our roof, with the one exception of Palaestrio, pitch him off into the street! And as for his saying he's chasing a hen, or a dove, or a monkey—you're dead men, if you don't cudgel him till he's ■ corpse. And furthermore, just to keep them from breaking the Dicing Act, see to it that when they give ■ party there's not a set of bones amongst 'em!

Per. Consider her told. Anything else before I go?

Pal. Yes, sir. Tell her this—she must be sure not to depart one inch from women's ways, but abide strictly by their tactics and training.

Per. How do you mean?

Pal. So as to persuade the servant that saw her he didn't see her. No matter if she were seen here a hundred times, she must deny it just the same. She's cheeky and glib and crooked, with plenty of shrewdness and nerve; she's full of intrepidity, indomitability, fraudulency. If anyone accuses her, she's to turn on him and out-swear him. She's stocked with smooth talk, smooth tricks, and smooth oaths, stocked with wiles, stocked with wheedling ways, stocked with humbug. I tell you, sir, a woman never applies to a costermonger, if she's full of the devil; she has her own stock of garden stuff, and all the sauces, for dishing up every kind of deviltry.

Per. I'll take this message to her, if she ■ here. (seeing Palaestrio is lost in meditation) But what are you communing with yourself about, Palaestrio?

Pal. Keep still a moment, sir, while I call my wits to council and confer as to what to do and how to take my turn at tricking that tricky fellow servant of mine that saw her kissing here, so as to make what was seen unseen.

masium's own twin sister has arrived from Athens with some lover of hers, and that she and Philocomasium are as much alike as two drops of milk. I'll say they're being entertained at your house here.

Per. Fine! Fine! Glorious! That's a great idea!

Pal. So if that fellow servant of mine goes to the soldier charging her with the fact that he saw her kissing a stranger here (indicating Periplectomenus's house) I'll rebut him, claiming that the fellow saw this sister at your house hugging and kissing her own lover.

Per. Wonderful, wonderful And I'll tell the same story, in case the soldier questions me.

Pal. But tell him they're absolutely alike, sir. And Philocomasium must be warned, so that she'll know about this and not make any slip, in case the soldier questions her.

Per. A very shrewd scheme, indeed! But if the soldier wants to see them both together, what then?

Pal. That's easy, sir. Hundreds of excuses can be evolved:—"She's not at home . . . she's out for a walk . . . she's asleep . . . dressing . . . bathing . . . dining . . . at a party . . . she's busy . . . not at leisure . . . it's impossible." You can put him off in any number of ways, so long as we get him started right—believing the lies we tell him.

Per. Yes, that sounds good.

Pal. Go in, then, sir, and if the girl's there, bid her go over home at once. And tell her about this, inform and instruct her fully, so that she'll understand this plan we're setting on foot, about her twin sister.

Pal. And I'll go home, too, and do the old gentleman a good turn, surreptitiously, by tracking down that fellow servant of mine who chased the monkey to-day. For he couldn't have helped talking and letting someone of the household share his news about master's mistress, how he saw her and ■ strange young fellow kissing each other here next door. I know their way—"Why, I just can't keep a secret all to myself." If I find the chap that saw her, I'll at him with mantlet and siege-shed. I'm ready for action, determined to take him by storm and assault. If I don't discover him in that way, I'll go sniffing about like a hound till I've followed the fox up by his track. (listening) But our door creaked! I must lower my voice. (Sceledrus appears in the doorway) Aha! It's my fellow servant, Philocomasium's guard, that's coming out. (steps back)

Scene 3. ENTER Sceledrus, WORRIED AND PERPLEXED.

Scel. Now if I wasn't walking on the roof in my sleep to-day, I'm positive, positive, by gad, that I did see master's mistress, Philocomasium, next door here looking for trouble!

Pal. (in ■ low tone) He's the chap that saw her kissing, from what I heard him say!

Scel. (looking about cautiously) I'm afraid.—

Pal. Afraid of what?

Scel. Oh Lord! That all sorts of trouble and torture are what every one of us slaves here is in for to-day!

Pal. (coldly) In by yourself, then! No such innings or outings for me!

Scel. I daresay you don't know about the horrible, unheard of thing that has happened at our house.

Pal. What is this horrible thing?

Scel. It's shameless!

Pal. You keep your knowledge quite to yourself; don't tell me; I do not want to know.

Scel. Well, I won't let you not know. I chased our monkey to-day on their roof. (pointing to Periplectomenus's house)

Pal. (drily) Gad, Sceledrus, then a useless man chased a worthless beast!

Scel. You be damned!

Pal. (vigorously) The appropriate thing for you—(mildly) is to tell your tale, since you have begun.

Scel. I just happened to happen to look down through the skylight into the house next door here, and there I spied Philocomasium and some young fellow, I don't know who, kissing each other.

Pal. (horrified) Sceledrus! What scandalous tale is this?

Scel. I certainly did see her.

Pal. You yourself?

Scel. I myself, with these two eyes of mine.

Pal. Oh, get out! A likely story! You saw no such thing!

Scel. (alarmed) Double? Really? How so?

Pal. (very superior) I will tell you how so. In the first place, if you accuse Philocomasium falsely, this will do for you; secondly, if it is true, you were appointed her guard, and that will do for you.

Scel. (doggedly) What'll become of me, I don't know; I certainly do know that this is what I saw.

Scel. I'll wait for you here. At the same time I'll waylay that heifer and see how soon she hies herself hitherward from pasture to stall. (reflecting, gloomily) What shall I do now? The soldier made ■ her guard. So if I disclose it, I'm ■ dead man; but if I keep mum, I'm a dead man still, once this gets out. Oh, what's worse or more audacious than a woman? strange young man, when it was that twin sister of mine kissing her own lover. This was my dream—that I was falsely accused, wrongfully.

Pal. (much impressed) So on waking, the same things befel you that you speak of dreaming about, ma'am? Well, well, by Jove! What a pat dream! In with you, ma'am, and pray! I would suggest, ma'am, that you tell the soldier about this.

Phil. (emphatically) Indced I will; I'll not be falsely accused of shameful conduct and (with a vindictive glance at Sceledrus) let the insult pass unpunished!

[EXIT INTO SOLDIER'S HOUSE.]

Scel. (aside, much worried) I'm afraid I've gone and done it, the way my whole back itches.

Pal. You realise that you are done for?

Scel. (with conviction) Well, now she's at home, for sure. (wavering) This much is sure—I'm going to watch our door now, wherever she is. (plants himself in front of it)

Pal. But upon my soul, Sceledrus, how that dream she dreamed did correspond to your suspicion that you saw her kissing!

Scel. I don't know what to believe my own self in, now, for what I . . . believe I saw, I'm . . . thinking now I didn't see.

Pal. Gad, man, I fancy you will be too late in coming to! Once this matter reaches master's ears, you are finely finished!

Scel. Yes, there must have been a mist over my eyes; at last I realise it.

Pal. Lord! That was evident before—she having been inside here all along.

Scel. (scratching his head) I can't say anything for sure. I didn't see her, and yet I did.

Scel. (who has been listening and staring at her) Palaestrio! Oh, Palaestrio!

Pal. (mimicking him) Oh, Sceledrus, Sceledrus! What d'ye want?

Scel. This woman (pointing) just coming out from here—is she master's mistress, Philocomasium, or isn't she?

Per. (gruffly) Off with you!

Scel. (solicitously) There's nothing else you want with me now, sir?

Per. (turning away) Yes—no further acquaintance.

Per. (gratified) But no matter how high the table is heaped, these same men never say: "Have that dish taken off . . . remove this platter . . . away with the ham, I don't care for any . . . off with that pork . . . this conger eel will be fine, cold—out with it, be off, take it away!" No such sentiments would you hear from a one of 'em, but down they flop, hanging their upper halves over the table, grabbing for food.

Pal. (still patient and polite) A good man's description of bad manners, sir!

Per. Oh, I haven't told you a hundredth part of the things I could bring up, if there were time for it.

Pal. (grasping his chance) Then the matter in hand—that ought to have our first thought, sir. Now turn your attention here, you two gentlemen. I must have your help, Periplectomenus; for I've hit on a delightful ruse for clipping our long-haired soldier close, and giving our lover here a chance to carry Philocomasium off and keep her for himself.

Per. Let's have that scheme of yours.

Pal. Well, sir, let me have that ring of yours. (pointing)

Per. What can you use it for?

Pal. When I get it, then you shall hear the scheme I've devised, sir.

- Pl.* Our ears are open and at your service.
- Pal.* Now my master is a woman-chaser such ■ never was, or will be, ■ believe.
- Pl.* (heartily) ■ believe the same.
- Pal.* He holds himself a handsomer man than Alexander, and tells how all the women in Ephesus therefore insist on running after him.
- Per.* (cynically) There's many a husband who heartily wishes the fellow really were so seductive. But I am perfectly aware he's what you say. So be ■ brief as possible, Palaestrio.
- Pal.* Can you find some delightful looking wench, sir, with a mind and wit crammed full of cleverness and wiles?
- Per.* (thinking) Freeborn or a freedwoman?
- Pal.* That's immaterial, so long as you give me one who's after money, whose body is her bodily support, and who's ready of wit: she can't be ready of mind, as ■ matter of fact, for no woman has one.
- Per.* D'ye want a swell wench, or one that hasn't yet swelled out?
- Pal.* Oh, you know—a fine juicy bit, just as delightful and young as can be.
- Per.* (after ■ moment) Aha! I have her! A client of mine, ■ beauty of ■ courtesan! But what do you need her for?
- Pal.* You are to take her home to your house at once, sir, and bring her here all got up like ■ married woman—the usual head-dress . . . hair done high

Pl. I fail to see where you're bound for.

Pal. Well, you will see. (to Periplectomenus)—But has she a maid?

Per. Yes, and a precious sly one.

Pal. (with increasing importance and imperiousness) She is needed, too. Give the wench and her maid these instructions: the mistress is to pretend that she's your wife, and dying for this soldier, and that she gave this ring to her petling of a maid who turned it over to me to give the soldier, I being the go-between in the affair.

Per. (sharply) I hear you. Please do not assume that I am deaf. I have full use of my ears.

Pal. (less consequential) I shall give it to him, sir, saying it was sent by your wife and given to me so that I might bring her and him together. This is the sort he is—he'll be crazy for her, poor fool, for adultery is the rascal's leading interest.

Per. (genial again) Why, if you gave old Sol the job of hunting for 'em, he couldn't find two more delightful wenches for this purpose than I can. Rest easy.

Pal. See to it, then, sir, but we need them quickly. (EXIT Periplectomenus). Now you listen here, Pleusicles.

Pal. And that your maid brought me this ring from you to pass ■ to the soldier in your name.

Acr. Quite correct.

Per. What's the use of all that repetition of things they remember?

Acr. It's better so. For consider this, my dear patron,—when you have a fine master-builder, and he has once laid down the keel true to line, building your ship is easy when that's all laid and set. Now this keel of ours is laid finely as can be and well set, and the master-builder has workmen for this job that are not unskilled. If we're not delayed by the timber-dealer with our raw material—I know what our powers promise—our ship will be ready in ■ time.

Pal. No doubt you know the soldier, my master?

Pyrg. Quid hic? unde est?

Pal. A luculenta atque festiva femina, tudinem;

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

Per. Well, then, let's go inside to practice and think over our parts, ■ that we can put the job through carefully and properly, and make not a single slip when the soldier comes.

Acr. It's you that delay us. [EXEUNT.]

ACT IV

ENTER Pyrgopolynices AND Palaestrio.

Pyrg. Ah, it is a great pleasure to have your affairs proceed in just such a delightful fashion as you wish. My own case, now—to-day I sent my parasite to King Seleucus so that he might conduct to Seleucus the mercenaries whom I hired to protect his kingdom while I take ■ rest.

Pal. Come, sir, attend to your own business rather than Seleucus's. Such ■ love affair as I'm commissioned to submit to you, sir, a new one, a dazzling one!

Pyrg. (condescendingly) Oh, well, everything else shall be secondary, and you shall have my attention. Speak. I surrender my ears to your suzerainty, by all means.

Pal. (mysteriously) Look about, then, sir, and see that no one is here to catch our conversation. For I was instructed to do this business secretly.

Pyrg. (majestically surveying the neighbourhood) No one is here.

Pal. (producing Pèriplectomenus's ring) First, sir, take this as a token of her affection.

Pyrg. (taking it) What have we here? Whence comes it?

Pal. From a dazzling and delectable lady, sir, who loves you, and longs to enjoy your beauteous beauty. And now she has sent me her ring by her maid, for me to hand over to you, sir.

TITUS MACCIUS PLAUTUS

Pyrg. Quid ea? ingenuan ■ festuca facta ■ serva liberast?

Pal. Vah, egone ut ad te ab libertina esse auderem internuntius, qui ingenuis satis responsare nequeas quae cupiunt tui?

Pyrg. Nuptan est an vidua?

Pal. Et nupta et vidua.

Pyrg. Quo pacto potis nupta et vidua esse eadem?

Pal. Quia adulescens nuptast cum sene.

Pyrg. Euge.

Pal. Lepida et liberali formast.

Pyrg. Cave mendacium.

Pal. Ad tuam formam illa una dignast.

Pyrg. Hercle pulchram praedicas.
sed quis east?

Pal. Senis huius uxor Periplectomeni ex proxumo; ea demoritur te atque ab illo cupit abire: odit senem.

nunc te orare atque obsecrare iussit, ut eam copiam sibi potestatemque facias.

Pyrg. Cupio hercle equidem, si illa volt.

Pal. Quae cupit?

Pyrg. Quid illa faciemus concubina, quae domist?

Pal. Quin tu illam iube abs te abire quo libet: sicut soror

eius huc gemina venit Ephesum et mater, accer-suntque eam.

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

Pyrg. (examining the ring and trying to hide his elation)
What about her? Is she freeborn, or some slave set free by the rod? ¹

Pal. Tush, sir! Would I dare be an envoy to you from a freedwoman, when you are unable to make adequate response to the freeborn ladies who crave for you?

Pyrg. Is she married or unmarried?

Pal. Married and unmarried, both, sir.

Pyrg. How can the same woman be both married and unmarried?

Pal. Because she's the young wife of an old husband, sir.

Pyrg. Excellent!

Pal. Oh, she's delightful, sir, and every inch a lady!

Pyrg. No lies, my man!

Pal. Sir, she's the one woman worthy of comparison with you.

Pyrg. (genuinely surprised) By Jove, what a beauty she must be! But who is she?

Pal. The wife of old Periplectomenus here next door,
sir. She's simply perishing for you, sir, and longs to leave him; she hates the old fellow. And now she has ordered me to beg and beseech you to grant her the opportunity and privilege of being yours.

Pyrg. (forgetting his indifference) By Jove, I certainly long to have her, if she wishes it. (slips on the ring)

Pal. Wishes it, sir? Longs for it!

Pyrg. What shall we do with that wench at home?

Pal. Why, sir, tell her to leave you and go where she likes—here's her twin sister, for instance, come to Ephesus with her mother, and they are after her.

TITUS MACCIUS PLAUTUS

Pyrg. Eho tu, an veniſt Ephesum mater eius?

Pal. Aiunt qui sciunt.

Pal. Immo vin tu lepide facere?

Pyrg. Loquere et consilium cedo.

Pal. Vin tu illam actutum amovere, ■ te ut abeat per gratiam?

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

Pyrg. Eh? What? Her mother has come to Ephesus?

Pal. So say those who know, sir.

Pyrg. By Jove! A delightful opportunity to get the girl out of my house!

Pal. But listen, sir. Do you want to do it in a delightful way?

Pyrg. Speak, out with your advice.

Pal. Do you want to put her out at once, sir, and yet have her part with you pleasantly?

Pyrg. I long to!

Pal. Then this is what you should do, sir. You have any amount of money: bid her keep the jewels and finery you fitted her out with for ■ present and take them and go away where she likes.

Pyrg. A good suggestion! But just look out that I do not let her go, only to have this other one break faith.

Pal. Tut, tut, sir! You're joking! When she loves you as her very eyes.

Pyrg. (complacently) It is Venus who loves me!

Pal. (listening) Sh-h! Keep still, sir! The door's opening! Step aside here out of sight! (pulls him back)

ENTER Milphidippa INTO Periplectomenus's DOORWAY.

This is her despatch-boat coming out, her go-between,¹ who brought me that ring I gave you, sir.

Pyrg. (ogling her) A pretty little piece, upon my soul!

Pal. Oh, sir, she's nothing but ■ little baboon, ■ miserable dodo chick, beside her mistress! (as

Scene 2.

Milph. (aside, coming out from the doorway and seeing them) The circus where I must do my tricks is in front of the house now. I'll pretend not to see them, or to know they're here yet.

Pyrg. (aside to Palaestrio) Hush! Let us listen quietly and see if any mention is made of me.

Milph. (aloud, looking everywhere save in their direction) Is there anyone near, I wonder, that minds other people's business more than his own, to spy out my doings—someone that doesn't have to earn his supper?¹ They're the people I'm afraid of now, that they'll hamper me or hinder somewhere, if mistress leaves her home, on her way across here, longing to lie in the arms of the man she loves—that, oh, so delightful, oh, so handsome soldier, Pyrgopolynices!

Pyrg. (aside to Palaestrio) So this wench is dying for me, too, eh? She admires my looks. Upon my soul, her words need no ashes.²

Pal. How do you make that out, sir?

Pyrg. Why, because what she says is so elegant and polished.

Pal. And why not? She speaks of you, sir: she has a polished subject.

Pyrg. Moreover, her mistress is a most delightful and elegant woman. Upon my soul, Palaestrio, I do begin to fancy her a bit already.

Pal. Before you've set eyes on her, sir?

Pyrg. My confidence in you amounts to seeing her.

Pal. Infidos celas: ego sum tibi firme fidus.

Pal. Vel adest vel non.

Milph. Cedo te mihi solae solum.

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

Besides, this little despatch-boat inclines me to love, even in absence.

Pal. Not to love her, sir, by gad, no! This girl is engaged to me: if the mistress marries you to-day, the maid becomes my wife directly.

Pyrg. Then why so backward in speaking to her?

Pal. (stepping forward) This way, then, sir.

Pyrg. (at his heels) I ■■■ your footman.

Milph. Oh, for a chance to meet the man I came out to see! (Palaestrio steps back again and pulls back the soldier)

Pal. (in ■ melodramatic tone) You shall have it, and what you pray for will come to pass. Be of good heart, have no fear; there is a certain ■■■ who knows the whereabouts of what you seek.

Milph. (alarmed, apparently not seeing them) Who is it I heard here?

Pal. (mysteriously, from his hiding place) A colleague in your councils, and ■ sharer of your counsels.

Milph. Goodness me! Then my secret is no secret!

Pal. Oh, no! A secret and no secret, both.

Milph. How can that be?

Pal. Secrets you keep from the untrustworthy: me you can trust entirely.

Milph. Give me the watchword, if you belong to our Bacchantes.

Pal. A certain woman loves a certain man.

Milph. Goodness me; many women do that!

Pal. But not many send a present from off their fingers.

Milph. Ah, now I know, now you have made the rough places plain! (anxiously, as Palaestrio steps out and comes toward her, waving the soldier back) But is anyone about here?

Pyrg. (bored) From which one? So many come to my mind, you know: I cannot remember.

Milph. From the one who despoils her own fingers and decks yours, sir. (pointing to the ring) For I brought him (indicating Palaestrio) this ring from a lady who pines for you, sir, and he passed it on to you.

Pyrg. Well, woman, what wish you now? Speak.

Milph. For you not to scorn a lady who longs for you, sir, who now lives but in your life. In you alone rests her hope, whether she is to survive or perish.

Pyrg. Well, what is her wish?

Milph. To converse with you, sir, to clasp you in her arms, caress you. Ah, sir, unless you bring her succour, she will soon be broken-hearted. (seizing his hand) Oh, my Achilles, come, grant my prayer, graciously save that gracious lady, draw forth from the wells of your mercy, O capturer of cities and slayer of kings! (Palaestrio nearly collapses)

Pyrg. (pushing her away) A fine to do! Lord, Lord, this is so tiresome! (to Palaestrio) How many times have I forbidden you, you villain, to promise my services in this fashion to the common crowd?

Pal. Do you hear, woman? I told you this before, and I tell you again: this boar must receive compensation, or he won't consort with every little sowlet.

Scene 3.

Pyrg. (calling after her) Bid her make haste and come out here. This affair shall have our primary attention now. (struts about, then worriedly) Palaestrio, what do you now recommend that I do regarding my mistress? For it is perfectly impossible for this lady to be received into my house before I get rid of her.

Pal. Why consult me about what to do, sir? I've told you, you know, how the matter can be handled most considerately. All the jewellery and clothes you fitted her out with, let her keep. Let her take 'em, keep 'em, carry 'em off; and tell her it's just the time for her to go home: say her twin sister and her mother are here and she can reach home quite comfortably in their company.

Pyrg. How do you know they are here?

Pal. Because I saw her sister here with my own eyes,
sir.

Pyrg. Have they met?

Pal. Yes, sir.

Pyrg. (lickerishly) A fine, strapping wench? Eh, what?

Pal. (reprovingly) You want to get hold of everything,
sir.

Pyrg. Where did the sister say her mother was?

Pal. She's abed on board the ship, sir, with her eyes all sore and swollen, according to the skipper who brought them here. He's stopping with these neighbours of ours. (*nodding toward Periplecto-

Pyrg. (deciding not to be angry) As to that advice you give me—I want you to discuss the matter with her yourself; for you are an ideal person to parley with her.

Pal. How is that better than going to her yourself, sir, and managing your own affair yourself? Say it's necessary for you to marry; your relatives urge it, your friends force it upon you.

Pyrg. (reluctant) That is your opinion?

Pal. Of course it is, sir.

Pyrg. (gathering himself together) I will go inside, then. You keep watch in front of the house, meanwhile, so as to call me out when the other one comes out.

Pal. (reassuringly) Just you see to your part of the business, sir.

Pyrg. (with affected ease) Oh, that is seen to. Why, if she declines to go of her own free will, I shall put her out by force.

Pal. Oh, sir, don't do that! No, no, do let her leave you on good terms. And give her those things I spoke of; let her take away the jewellery and finery you furnished her with.

Pyrg. Lord! I only hope she will!

Pal. I think you'll easily prevail upon her, sir. But do go in, sir. Don't keep standing here.

Milph. Not enough yet, though.

Pal. Cheer up! The whole affair is shaping itself well now; only keep ■ giving it a helping hand, as you have so far. Our soldier, you know, has gone inside to (chuckling) entreat his mistress to leave him and go to Athens with her sister and mother.

the danger's greatest of your falling down again? We have our affair at the top of the well now: if the soldier gets suspicious, it'll all escape us. Now's the time when we most need to be artful. I see we have at hand enough material for our siege—three women, you, sir, for a fourth, me for a fifth, and the old gentleman for a sixth; with the stratagems we six have to draw on, I know for sure that whatever city should be assigned us can be captured by our arts. Only give me your attention.

Acr. That's why we are here, to learn your wishes.

Acr. By pretending that I'm rent with passion for him, of course.

Pal. Precisely.

Acr. And that this passion has made me divorce my husband (with a nod toward Periplectomenus's house) in my longing to marry him.

Pal. Quite correct. There's only one more point, though—say that this house (indicating that of Periplectomenus) is part of your dowry, and the old man left you and went away after you divorced him. We mustn't have our warrior timid about entering another man's house later on.

Acr. A good suggestion!

Pal. But when he comes out, I want you to stay there at a distance and pretend to scorn your own beauty in comparison with his, and to be awed Pal. Quite enough. Now, sir, (turning to Pleusicles) it is your turn to learn my commands. Pal. Come here for Philocomasium, in her mother's name, and tell her if she intends to go to Athens to hurry to the harbour with you, and to order anything she wants put aboard to be carried to the ship. Say that if she's not going, you will cast off directly, there being a fair wind.

Pl. A very pleasing picture! Proceed.

Pal. The soldier will promptly urge her to go, to hurry up, so as not to keep her mother waiting.

Pal. (trying to resign himself) My hopes will rest in heaven and you, sir. But at any rate, sir, bitter though it is to me to be deprived of such a wonderful master as you, this at least is a joy to me—that your own irresistible beauty, and my efforts, have brought you this affair with our neighbour whom I'm now securing for you.

Pyrg. Enough said. You shall be a free man, and a wealthy one, if you carry it through.

Milph. No doubt, for, dear me, such a time as I had approaching him and winning his consent!

Pal. (aside to the soldier) How renowned you are, sir, amongst the ladies!

Pyrg. (devoutly) I must resign myself, since such is the will of Venus.

Acr. Ah, I offer thanks to Venus, and beg and entreat her that I may win the man I love and yearn for, and that he may be gracious to me, and not grudge me my desire.

Milph. I hope it will be so, ma'am, although there are many women that yearn for him: but he scorns them, spurns them all, ma'am, except you alone.

Acr. (despairingly) Ah, that, that disdain of his, is just what makes me suffer so from fear that his eyes may make him change his mind, on seeing me, and that a man of his fine taste may spurn my poor attractions instantly.

Pyrg. (aside to Palaestrio) I must not let the woman die, surely. Shall I approach her?

Pal. By no means, sir. Why, you'll cheapen yourself, if you lavish yourself, unasked. Let her come to you, unasked; let her do the seeking and pining and waiting. Do you want to lose that reputation that you have? Please, sir, don't do it. For I am sure that no mortal man save two—yourself and Lesbian Phaon¹—has had the fortune to be so loved by woman.

Acr. (with desperate resolution) Milphidippa dear, call him out here, or else I'll go in to him.

Acr. (as in a trance) Because he whom I want is not within.

Milph. How do you know?

Acr. I know, ah Heavens, I know! I can smell. Yes, yes, my nose would detect it from the odour, were he within!

Pal. (aside to Pyrgopolynices) She has second sight, sir.

Pyrg. Because she loves me, she is therefore endowed by Venus with powers of divination.

Acr. (sniffing delicately) Somewhere hereabout is the man I yearn to see! I smell him, I do, I do!

Pyrg. (aside to Palaestrio) Upon my soul, the woman actually sees better with her nose than eyes!

Pal. Love blinds her, sir.

Acr. (catching sight of the soldier) Hold me, hold me, for heaven's sake! (about to swoon)

Milph. (supporting her) Why?

Acr. (weakly) Or I'll fall!

Milph. What for?

Acr. Because I cannot stand—so do my senses fail me by reason of my eyes!

Milph. (after a moment of mystification) Heavens! You've spied the soldier! (looks about)

Acr. Yes!

Milph. I don't see him. Where is he?

Acr. Ah me! You would see him, if you loved him!

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

Pyrg. (confidentially) I do not know whether I have informed you of it or not—but I am the grandson of Venus.

Acr. (trembling) Milphidippa, dear, approach him, go up to him, I beseech you! (gazes upon him, entranced, throughout the scene)

Pyrg. (aside to Palaestrio) How I do awe her!

Pal. (as Milphidippa nears them) She's making for us.

Milph. (pleadingly) I want you, sirs.

Pyrg. (ogling her) And we you!

Milph. I have brought my mistress out, as you bade me, sir.

Pyrg. (repenting of his ardour) So I perceive.

Milph. Then do bid her approach, sir.

Pyrg. I have prevailed upon myself not to loathe her ■■■ I do the others, since you have pleaded for her.

Milph. Dear me, sir, she won't be able to utter a single word, if she once comes near you. While she gazes upon you, sir, her eyes have meanwhile cut off her tongue.

Pyrg. The woman's ailment must be alleviated, I perceive.

Milph. How tremulous and terror-stricken she was when she beheld you!

Pyrg. (sublime) So also are armed warriors wont to be; wonder not at this terror in a woman. But what does she wish me to do?

Milph. To go to her house, sir: she wants to live with you, to pass her whole life with you.

Pyrg. (alarmed) I go to her house—a married woman? Her husband would discover me.

Milph. But she has put her husband out for your sake, sir.

Pyrg. How could she do that?

Milph. Because the house is part of her dowry.

Pyrg. (struggling against his elation) Bid her go home. I will be there shortly.

Milph. Do see you don't keep her waiting, sir, or you'll make her suffer agonies.

Pyrg. No, no, I will not. Be off with you!

Pyrg. (looking down the street) But what is this I see?

Pal. What do you see, sir?

Pyrg. (pointing) Look! Someone or other is striding up—and in sailor's togs!

Pal. He's making for our house! He wants you, sir, that's clear. Why, it's that shipmaster!

Pyrg. Coming to fetch the wench now, no doubt!

Pal. I do believe so. (they step back)

Pl. (aside, not seeing them) If I weren't aware that love has led other men to play all sorts of other scurvy tricks, I'd have more scruples over my own love's making me parade about in this rig. But considering the many men I've heard of who've done many dishonourable things, indecent things, because of love—not to mention how Achilles let his own compatriots be slaughtered—(seeing Palaestrio and the soldier) Aha, though! Palaestrio standing there with the soldier! I must change the tenor of my remarks!

Pal. (stepping up to him) What's the matter, sir? What do you want? What are you knocking for?

Pl. (brusquely) I'm looking for Philocomasium. I come from her mother. If she's going, she must go now. She's delaying everyone: we want to cast off.

Pyrg. We have been ready this long time. Palaestrio, go get some assistants to help you to carry her things to the ship, her jewellery, trinkets, clothes, all her valuables. All the stuff I gave her is packed up: let her take it away.

Pal. Going, sir. [EXIT.]

Pl. (shouting after him) And for God's sake, hurry!

Pyrg. He will not keep you waiting. (interested in Pleusicles's bandage) What ails you, pray? What have you done with your eyes?

Pl. (lifting the bandage a bit from his right eye, which is more exposed) Lord, man, I have an eye, all right.

Pyrg. But the left one, I mean.

Pl. Well, I'll tell you. It was my love of the deep, by gad, that cost me the full use of this eye, for if it wasn't for this deep-love of mine, I'd be using it as well as the other one. (hastily) But they're keeping me too long!

Pyrg. (as his door opens) Look, there they come.

Phil. (sobbing bitterly) How can I help . . . weeping?
Life has been . . . oh, so . . . beautiful here, and now I'm . . . going away!

Pal. (pointing to Pleusicles) Look! There's the man

Phil. I . . . see him.

Pal. What is it, sir?

Pyrg. Why do you not order all the things I gave her to gives instructions to slaves within)

Pl. Good day, Philocomasium.

Phil. Good day to . . . you, sir.

Pl. Your mother and sister told me to give you their best wishes.

Phil. They have . . . mine.

Pl. They beg you to come while there's a fair wind, so that they may set sail. If your mother's eyes

Phil. I'll . . . go. Although I go . . . unwillingly, it would be . . . undutiful not to go.

Pl. That's a sensible girl.

Pyrg. But she would be a simpleton still, if she had not

Phil. (adoringly) That is what . . . torments me—to be you can make . . . anyone (glancing slyly at Pleusicles) clever as can be. And because I was

- Pyrg.* Bear up, bear up.
- Phil.* Ah, but I know how I . . . suffer!
- Pal.* Indeed, I don't wonder at all that you loved to live with him, Philocomasium, and that his beauty and his ways and his bravery hold your heart here, for, mere slave though I am, when I look on him, I (hiding his face) weep at our being parted.
- Phil.* May I embrace you before I go my way, oh, may I?
- Pyrg.* (graciously) You may.
- Phil.* (falling on his breast) Oh, my precious one, oh, soul of my soul!
- Pal.* (drawing her away and guiding her tottering steps to Pleusicles) For heaven's sake, hold the woman, sir, or she'll dash her brains out! (Pleusicles supports her, much too tenderly, as she swoons)
- Pyrg.* (looking at them) Eh? Eh? What does that mean?
- Pal.* (hurriedly) She's suddenly fallen into a faint, poor thing, because of leaving you, sir?
- Pyrg.* Run inside and bring some water!
- Pal.* Never mind the water, sir; I think she had better rest. (as Pyrgopolynices advances toward her) Don't get near her, sir, for mercy's sake, while she's recovering!
- Pyrg.* (doubtfully) That pair have their heads too closely together. I don't like it. (shouting, as Pleusicles kisses her) Hey, sailor, get your lips away from hers! Look out for trouble!
- Pl.* I was trying to see if she was breathing, or not.
- Pyrg.* You should have used your ear for that.
- Pl.* (indifferently) If you prefer, I'll let her go.
- Pyrg.* No, no! Keep hold of her!

ENTER SERVANTS WITH Philocomasium's LUGGAGE

1340

Pal. (turning for a last sad look into the house) And now once more, God of this household, I salute thee before I go! And you, my fellow servants all, male and female, good bye and good luck to you! Speak good things of me amongst yourselves, I pray you, absent though I am! (sobs violently)

Pyrg. Come, come, Palaestrio, take heart!

Pal. Ah, sir! I can't help . . . weeping at leaving . . . you!

Pyrg. Bear it bravely.

Pal. Ah, but I know how I suffer!

Phil. (regaining consciousness, slowly) But what is this? (looking about vacantly) What's the matter? What do I see? Ah, light of day!

Pl. Have you recovered now?

Phil. (horrified) For heaven's sake, what man have I embraced? Oh, this is death! Am I in my senses? (sinks again on Pleusicles's breast)

Pl. Never fear, (in a low tone) my heart's delight!

Pyrg. (noticing Pleusicles's unnecessary fervour) What does this mean?

Pal. (stepping up to them) She lost consciousness just now, sir. (in a low tone to Pleusicles) I'm frightfully worried this'll finally become altogether too public! (Philocomasium revives again)

1350

Pyrg. (overhearing, in part). What do you mean?

Pal. (extemporizing weakly) Our being followed through the city now by all this stuff, sir. (pointing to Philocomasium's luggage) I'm afraid people may turn this to your discredit, sir.

Pyrg. (loftily) These gifts come from me, not from them; little I care about such folk. (impatient) Come, be off, and heaven bless you!

Pyrg. Bear up, bear up!

Pal. Ah me, sir, when I . . . reflect how I must change my . . . ways—learn the ways of . . . women, and forget the . . . warriors!

Pyrg. Be a good, honest fellow.

Pyrg. That is not my way.

Pal. Reflect, sir, now and then, upon my . . . fidelity to you. If you do this, sir, you will . . . finally know who your good and . . . bad servants are.

Pyrg. I know it now, I have often noted it.

THE BRAGGART WARRIOR

if we let you out of here alive, you dear little grandson of Venus!

Pyrg. (servently) I swear by Jupiter and Mars, sir, not to harm a single soul for being cudgelled here to-day, and I think I was treated rightly, sir! And if I get away from here without losing my power to bear witness as a man, I'll be getting more than I deserve, sir!

Per. What if you break your promise?

Pyrg. Then I'll promise to live all my life without that power, sir.

Cario (to Periplectomenus, judicially) I move we club him again, sir, and then let him go.

Pyrg. (overjoyed) Oh, God bless you forever and ever, for coming to my support!

Cario Well then, give us (indicating the slaves) twenty pounds.

Pyrg. What for?

Cario For letting you get away from here to-day, bearing your witnesses intact, you dear little grandson of Venus! Otherwise, (surveying his knife) you shan't get away, don't fool yourself!

Pyrg. (hastily) You shall have it!

Cario That's wiser of you. As for your tunic and military cloak and sword, have no hopes of them, you won't get 'em. (to Periplectomenus) Shall I club him again, sir, or will you loose him now?

Pyrg. (drearly) Really, sir, I've been beaten till I'm loose already. Have mercy!

Per. (to slaves) Release the fellow. (they do so)

Pyrg. (rising, gratefully) Thanks, sir, thanks!

Per. If I catch you here hereafter, you shall lose those witnesses.

Pyrg. (humbly) I make no objection, sir. ^

Has Philocomasium set out already? Tell me, tell me!

Slave Long ago.

Pyrg. Oh, damnation!

Slave You'd say that all the more, if you knew what I know. Why, that chap with the woollen patch on his left eye was no sailor.

Pyrg. (startled) Who was he, then?

Slave Philocomasium's lover.

Pyrg. How do you know?

Slave I know. Why, they — sooner got outside the city gate than they fell to kissing and hugging each other.

Pyrg. (aside) Oh, poor fool that I am! I've been gulled, I see it now! It's Palaestrio, that scoundrel of a fellow, that enticed me into this trap! (pauses, then with dignity) My finding is, "A true bill." If other adulterers were so treated, adulterers would be fewer here, their apprehension would be greater, and their appetite for such affairs less. ARGUMENT OF THE PLAY

Philolaches, in his father's absence, purchases and sets free the girl he loves, and runs through all his property. When the old gentleman returns, Tranio takes him in with a tale how his house was haunted by ghastly apparitions which long ago forced the family to leave it. A money-loving moneylender obtrudes himself and demands his interest. Again the old gentleman is made the butt, Tranio alleging that they had got a loan to make a payment on the house they had bought. Asked what house it was, Tranio said it was their next-door neighbour's. The old gentleman inspects it. Later, though stung by being made a laughing-stock, he is nevertheless appeased by his son's chum.

Gr. (very irate) You kindly come out of the kitchen, you ropes-end! Showing me how smart you can be amongst your saucepans! Come on out from the house there, you family vampire! By gad, once on the farm and I'll pay you back in fine shape, sure as I'm alive! Come out, I tell you, you stench, from the kitchen! What are you skulking for?

ENTER Tranio, DAPPER AND DEBONAIR.

Tr. Why the devil are you making all this row out in front here? Think you are on the farm, do you? Away from the house with you! Off to your farm! Off and be hanged! Away from the doorway! There! (cuffs him) Is that what you were itching for?

Gr. (cowering) Oh, oh-h! What are you hitting me for?

Tr. Oh, for living.

Gr. All right, all right! But only let old master come back, only let him get safely back—the man you're eating out of house and home while he's away!

Gr. Oh, yes, you city swell, you public pet, you! So you're throwing the farm in my face, eh? And I reckon I know why, all right, Tranio—because you know you'll be landed in the mill before long. Within a few days, by gad, you'll be swelling our numbers on the farm and joining our ball-and-chain club! So now you've got the chance, and choose to do so, drink away, wreck the property, demoralize that fine young son of master's! Get fuddled day and night, live like Greeks, buy girls and set 'em free, feed parasites, go in for fancy catering! Are these the instructions the old master gave you when he went abroad? Is this how he'll find his property here has been attended to? Is this your notion of a good servant doing his duty—to ruin his master's estate and son, together? For ruined he is, I take it, from the sort of things he's going in for. Why, before, there wasn't a young fellow in all Attica that had his reputation for thrift, or led a cleaner life, while now he wins the prize the other way. And it's you and your teachings he can thank for it!

Tr. What the devil do you mean by minding me or my affairs? At the farm, for heaven's sake, have you no cows to mind? I choose to drink my wine, to have my love affairs, to bring home girls. I take chances with my own hide thereby, not with yours.

Gr. Listen to the cheek of him!

Tr. Oh, be damned to you! Phew! You smell of garlic! Ugh, you lump of native filth, you clod-hopper, he-goat, pig-sty, mixture of mire and manure!

It's this—what I'm to think a man is similar to, when he's born, what is his . . . semblance. And now I've found this parallel.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

there, when you hear what I say, won't say anything different, but admit it's exactly as I now aver. Listen while I let you hear how I . . . reason it all out. I want you to be as . . . well informed about it all as I am.

As soon as a house is all . . . complete, all finished off, constructed to a T, they . . . compliment the builder and commend the house. Everyone prays the owner for the . . . plan, everyone wants one like it for himself, and spares himself no expense and effort. But when some . . . slacker with ■ shiftless household, some slovenly good-for-nothing sluggard moves into that house, then the house suffers for it, being a good house, but badly . . . cared for. And then it often happens that a . . . storm comes and smashes the tiles and gutters. Then the shiftless owner refuses to replace them. Down comes a . . . rain, and runs right through the walls, oozes into 'em, rots the . . . timbers, ruins the builder's work. And now the house grows the worse for wear. And it's not the builder's fault at all, but this is the way with most people—if a thing can be repaired for sixpence, they . . . put it off and put it off and don't attend to it, till finally the walls cave in—and the whole house has to be rebuilt.

So much for . . . buildings. Now I want to go on and state why you should think men are similar to houses. Now in the first place, parents are the . . . builders of their children. They lay the foundations of their children's lives. They rear them, do their best to construct them . . . solidly, and spare nothing necessary to making them useful and ornamental as men and citizens. Men are created in this, they don't start as They put on the finishing touches—teach them literature, the . . . principles of justice, law, expend their money and their labour in striving that others may pray for their own sons to be like them. So . . . constructed, they send them into the army, now at the last giving them as a support some kinsman of their own. So much for this. They leave the builders' hands. And after one campaign is served, then signs are seen how the building will turn out.

Myself, now—till then—while I was in the builders' hands, I was always a steady, serious-minded chap. But after I . . . moved into my own disposition, I ruined the builders' work instantly and entirely. A spirit of idleness came over me. That was my . . . storm. Coming upon me heavy with hail, it instantly beat down and bared me of my poor coating of modesty and morals. And after that I was too negligent to . . . re-cover myself. Presently, in place of rain, love came and kept dripping, dripping into my breast, drenching my very heart. And now my money and my credit, my reputation, character and good name all are gone together. I, also, have become very much the worse for wear. Yes, by heaven, these . . . timbers of mine, too, are all soaked and rotten now! And I seem unable to repair my house and keep it from . . . caving in entirely and falling in everlasting ruins, foundations and all, and not a soul can help me.

It makes me sick at heart to see what I am now, and what I was. Not one of our young fellows trained harder or was better known an . . . athlete. Discus, spear, ball, running, fencing, riding—that ■■■ high life and happiness enough for me, ■ pattern, as I was, for others, of strict and . . . simple living, ■ man whom all the finest fellows sought to make their . . . model. And now that I'm good for nothing, oh well, (stops moodily in front of Simo's house) it's my own disposition that has made ■■■ so.

ENTER Philematium AND Scapha WITH TOILET ARTICLES FROM THE HOUSE OF Theopropides.

Phil. Gracious! I haven't enjoyed ■ cold bath more for ages! I do believe I never had ■ better scouring, Scapha, dear. (begins to busy herself with her toilet, continuing it throughout the scene)

Sc. (smiling at her mistress's enthusiasm) Everything has its outcome, just as this year brought a big harvest.

Phil. (puzzled) What has that harvest got to do with my bath?

Sc. (lightly) No more than your bath has to do with the harvest.

Philol. (aside, seeing her) Oh, lovely queen of love! Here, here, is the storm that stripped me bare of all my covering of modesty! Then love and passion oozed into my breast, and now I can't re-cover it, ever. Now the walls of my heart are drenched, this house an utter ruin!

Phil. (prinking) Scapha, dear, do please look me over and see if this gown is really becoming. I do ■ want to please Philolaches, (fondly) my darling, my protector!

Sc. Why not wear just winsome ways for decoration, since you are so winsome yourself? It's not the gown ■ lover loves, but the gown's contents.

Phil. (posing) Well, now?

Sc. (pretending not to understand) Well, what?

Phil. Oh, look, do look me over and see if this is becoming!

Sc. You're so lovely yourself that whatever you have becomes you.

Philol. (aside, warming up) There now! I'll certainly make you ■ present of something, Scapha, for those words. I won't let you praise the girl that pleases me, for nothing.

Phil. (soberly) I don't want you to flatter me.

Sc. You're a very silly girl, then. Oho! You'd rather be run down insincerely than sincerely admired? Goodness gracious, I much prefer a compliment, insincere or not, to sincere criticism, or to having folks make fun of my looks—indeed I do!

Phil. (quietly) I love sincerity, I want what is said to me to be sincere. I hate a liar.

Sc. I swear by your love for me, ma'am, by your Philolaches' love for you, you're simply charming!

Philol. (aside) What's that, you wretch? What sort of an oath was that? By my love for her? How about hers for me? Why wasn't that added? I give up giving you that present! You're done for. And as for the present I promised you, you have done for that!

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Phil. Oh, do please show ■ what it is, if I'm making any mistake!

Sc. "Mistake"? I should say you were—the way you're all wrapped up in that one man and fairly worship him, without as much as looking at anyone else! This giving yourself up to one lover is all right for married women, but not for mistresses.

Philol. (aside) Good Lord! Why, what sort of monster's at large in my house? May I be damned by all the powers above to death and torment, if I don't do that old hag to death, with hunger, thirst, and cold!

Phil. Scapha, I don't want any such wicked advice from you!

Sc. But you are silly, that's plain, to think he'll always be fond of you and nice to you for ever. ■ warn you—he'll leave you when you're older and he's colder.

Phil. (wistful) I hope not.

Sc. "More oft come true our hope-nots than our hopes." I tell you what, ma'am, if words can't convince you that my words are true, just look at facts. You see what I am now. And, oh, what I used to be! I was loved no less than you are now; I devoted myself to just one man—and he, oh well, when age came on and changed the colour of this head of mine, he left me, deserted me. That will be your case, too, I fancy.

Philol. (aside) It's all I can do to keep from flying at her eyes, the fiend!

Phil. He spent his own money to set me free, just me, and just for himself. I feel I'm only doing what I ought in devoting myself to him, and just him.

TITUS MACCIUS PLAUTUS

Philol. Pro di immortales, mulierem lepidam et pudico ingenio.

bene hercle factum et gaudeo mihi nihil esse huius causa.

Sc. Inscita ccastor tu quidem es.

Phil. Quapropter?

Sc. Quae istuc cures, ut te ille amet.

Phil. Cur obsecro non curem?

Sc. Libera es iam.

tu iam quod quaerebas habes; ille te nisi amabit ultro, id pro tuo capite quod dedit perdiderit tantum argenti.

Philol. Perii hercle, ni ego illam pessumis exemplis enicasso, illa hanc corrumpit mulierem malesuada¹ vitilena.

Phil. Numquam ego illi possum gratiam referre ut meritust de me.

Scapha, id tu mihi ne suadeas, ut illum minoris pendam.

Sc. At hoc unum facito cogites: si illum inservibis solum dum tibi nunc haec aetatulast, in senecta male querere.

Philol. In anginam ego nunc ■■■ velim verti, ut veneficae illi fauces prehendam atque enicem sceleratam stimulatricem.

Phil. Eundem animum oportet nunc mihi esse gratum, ut impetravi, atque olim, prius quam id extudi, quom illi sub-blandiebar.

Philol. Divi me faciant quod volunt, ni ob istam orationem te liberasso dCno et ni Scapham enicasso.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Philol. (aside) Ye immortal gods! Now, isn't she a sweet, pure-hearted creature? By Jove, I did ■ good job, and it's glad I am to be ■ ruined man for her sake!

Sc. My goodness! Such a little stupid!

Phil. Why?

Sc. To care about his loving you.

Phil. "Care"? For mercy's sake, why shouldn't I?

Sc. You're free now. Now you've got what you were after. As for him, unless he still goes on loving you, he'll have thrown away all that money he paid out for you.

Philol. (aside) By gad, I'll be damned if I don't kill that woman off by inches! Trying to spoil the girl with her vile suggestions, the old bawdyslut!

Phil. I can't ever be grateful enough to him, never! And don't you try to make me think any less of him, Scapha.

Sc. But see you consider this one thing—if you give yourself up to him entirely now while you're young, you'll rue it bitterly when you're old.

Philol. (aside) Oh, if I could change to a quinsy, so ■ to catch that viper in the throat and kill her off, the foul old fiend!

Phil. I ought to feel the same affection, now I've obtained my wish, as I did when I used to pet him before I'd won it.

Philol. (aside) May Heaven work its will on me, if I don't set you free all over again for saying that—and also, if I don't kill Scapha!

TITUS MACCIUS PLAUTUS

Sc. Si tibi sat acceptum est fore tibi victum sempiternum atque illum amatorem tibi proprium futurum in vita,

Phil. soli gerundum censeo morem et capiundas crines.
Vt fama est homini, exin solet pecuniam invenire.
ego si bonam famam mihi servasso, sat ero dives.

Philol. Siquidem hercle vendundust pater, venibit multo potius,
quam te me vivo umquam sinam egere aut mendicare.

Sc. Quid illis futurum est ceteris qui te amant?

Phil. Magis amabunt, quom me videbunt gratiam referre bene merenti.

Philol. Vtinam nunc meus emortuos pater ad me nuntietur, ut ego exheredem meis bonis me faciam atque
haec sit heres.

Sc. Iam ista quidem absumpta res erit: dies noctesque estur bibitur, neque quisquam parsimoniam adhibet: sagina plane est.

Philol. In te hercle certumst principe ut sim parcus experiri, nam neque edes quicquam neque bibes apud me his decem diebus.

Phil. Si quid tu in illum bene voles loqui, id loqui licebit:
nec recte si illi dixeris, iam ecastor xapulabis.

Philol. Edepol si summo Iovi bovi eo argento sacrificassem, pro illius capite quod dedi, numquam aeque id bene locassem.

videas eam medullitus me amare. Oh, probus homo sum:

quae pro me causam diceret, patronum liberavi.

¹ The Roman bride arranged her hair in a special way.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

- Sc. Well, if you have ■ guarantee that he'll be food for you eternally and be your own fond lover all your life, the thing for you is to put yourself at his sole disposal and—(almost venomous) fix up your hair for the wedding.¹
- Phil. One is generally able to get money according to the sort of name one has. If I always keep ■ good name, I shall be rich enough.
- Philol. (aside) By Jove, now, even if it comes to selling my father, sold he shall be, much sooner than I'll let you come to want or beggary while I'm alive!
- Sc. What'll become of those other men that are in love with you?
- Phil. They'll love me all the more when they see that I show gratitude to my benefactor.
- Philol. (aside, ecstatic) Oh, for news now of my father's demise, so that I could disinherit myself of all I owned and make her my heir!
- Sc. All he has, anyhow, will soon be squandered—eating and drinking day and night, with no one giving a thought to thrift. Downright stuffing, I call it.
- Philol. (aside) Thrift? By gad, I'll try it, for a fact, and try it first on you. Not ■ thing to eat or drink shall you have in my house for the next ten days!
- Phil. (firmly) If you wish to say something nice about him, do so. But if you go on abusing him, I swear you shall have a whipping directly!
- Philol. (aside) By gad, if I had made an offering of an ox to Jove Almighty with the money I paid out for her, it would never have been so well invested. You can see she loves me with all her soul. Oh, I'm a fine one! I've freed an advocate to plead

Sc. Video te nihili pendere prae Philolache omnis homines.

Phil. nunc, ne eius causa vapulem, tibi potius adsentabor.¹
Cedo mi speculum et cum ornamentis arculam actutum, Scapha, ornata ut sim, quom huc adveniat Philolaches voluptas mea.

Sc. Mulier quae se suamque aetatem spernit, speculo ei usus est :
quid opust speculo tibi, quae tute speculo speculum es maximum?

Philol. Ob istue verbum, ne nequiquam, Scapha, tam lepide dixeris, dabo aliquid hodie peculi tibi, Philematium mea.

Phil. Suo quique loco (viden?) capillus satis compositust commode?

Sc. Vbi tu commoda es, capillum commodum esse credito.

Philol. Vah, quid illa pote pcius quicquam muliere memorarier?
nunc adsentatrix scelesta est, dudum adversatrix erat.

Phil. Cedo cerussam.

Sc. Quid cerussa opust nam?

Phil. Qui malas oblinam.

Sc. Vna opera ebur atramento candefacere postules.

Philol. Lepide dictum de atramento atque ebore. euge, plaudo Scaphae.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

- Sc. I see you feel there's ■ one fit to hold ■ candle to Philolaches. So I'd rather agree with you, and not get whipped on his account.¹
- Phil. Give me the mirror and the jewel casket. Quick, Scapha! I must be all got up when Philolaches comes, (reminiscently) the darling! (takes mirror and arranges her hair)
- Sc. It's the woman that's dubious about her looks and years must use a mirror. What do you need of a mirror, when you yourself are the very mirror's own best mirror?
- Philol. (aside) You shan't make such a pretty speech for nothing, Scapha. I'll certainly give you something for your very own—Philematium dear.
- Phil. Is everything all right—won't you look? Is my hair put up prettily enough?
- Sc. When you're pretty yourself, you can be positive your hair is pretty.
- Philol. (aside) Bah! Can you mention anything worse than that woman there? Now she's all compliments, the slut! A moment ago she was all contradictions!
- Phil. Give ■ the ceruse.
- Sc. Ceruse, indeed! What for?
- Phil. To rub on my cheeks.
- Sc. You might as well expect to whiten ivory with ink.
- Philol. (aside) Very neat—ivory and ink! Bravo, Scapha! Congratulations!
- Phil. Well, then, give me the rouge.
- Sc. No, I won't. Lots of sense you show! You want to daub fresh paint ■ a perfectly lovely picture?

caput.

Sc. Lintcum cape atque exterge tibi manus.

Phil. Quid ita, obsecro?

Sc. Vt speculum tenuisti, metuo ne olant argentum laches.

Philol. Non videor vidisse lenam callidiorem ullam alteras. 270 malae.

Phil. Etiamne unguentis unguendam censes?

Sc. Minime feceris.

Phil. Quapropter?

Sc. Quia ecastor mulier recte olet, ubi nihil olet.
nam istae veteres, quae se unguentis unctitant, interpoles,
vetulae, edentulae, quae vitia corporis fulco occu-lunt,
ubi sese sudor cum unguentis consociavit, ilico

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Girls of your age shouldn't touch a bit of color, or ceruse, Melian cream, or any other cosmetic.

Phil. Here, then, take the mirror. (holds it close to her face for a final examination and then hands it to Scapha) Philol. (aside) Blast it! She kissed the mirror! Oh for a stone to smash that mirror's head with!

Sc. Take a towel and wipe your hands.

Phil. For mercy's sake, why?

Sc. (grinning) Now that you've held the mirror, I'm afraid your hand will smell of silver, and that's something Philolaches mustn't suspect you of taking from anyone.

Philol. (aside) I don't believe I ever saw ■ sharper old bawd. Pretty neat—that idea about the mirror, and canny, too, the sinner!

Phil. Surely I should put on a little perfume, don't you think?

Sc. Most certainly not.

Phil. Why?

Sc. Goodness me! Because a woman smells right when she doesn't smell at all. Why, those ancient dames that pickle themselves in perfume, made-up crones without any teeth, that try to paint away their bodily blemishes—as soon as their perfume and perspiration come together, they smell the same as when a cook combines a lot of sauces. You can't tell what they smell of, but you're sure of one thing—they smell vile.

Philol. (aside) Oh, she's ■ mighty wise one! She's up to it all! There never was a wiser old wench! (turning to the audience) You know she's right, most of you who have old dames at home for wives, that bought you with their dowries.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Phil. (after a few final adjustments) Here now, Scapha, do look over my jewellery, and gown, and see if it really is becoming.

Sc. That shouldn't be any concern of mine.

Phil. Whose should it be, then, for goodness' sake?

Sc. Well—Philolaches'!¹ So that he won't buy anything except what he thinks suits himself. But what's the use of showing off to him, unasked, something he doesn't want to own?² A pretty girl is prettier undressed than dressed in purple.³ For then she's overdressed, if she's really pretty.

Philol. (aside) I'm keeping hands off too long. (stepping up to them) What's going on here?

Phil. (in his arms) I'm getting all dressed up to please you.

Philol. (ogling her) Oh, you're dressed enough! (to Scapha, gruffly) Be off inside with you, and take this (with a wave at the toilet accessories) frippery along. [EXIT Scapha.

But, my darling, my own Philematium, I'd love to have some wine with you.

Phil. Oh, and I with you! For whatever you like, I like, my (snuggling closer) darling.

Philol. (rapturous) Ah! That word would come cheap at a hundred pounds.

Phil. (smiling up at him) Well, give me fifty, there's ■ dear! I want you to buy at ■ bargain.

Philol. (lightly) You owe me fifty still—tot it up, dear, if you like. It was a hundred and fifty I paid for you.

² V. 288: Purple belongs to shady years, jewels to ugly women.

³ Vv. 290–291: And then it's no use being nicely dressed if one's ways aren't nice. Disgusting ways soil a pretty dress more than mud.

haec qui gaudent, gaudeant perpetuo suo semper bono;

qui invident, ne umquam eorum quisquam invideat prosus commodis.

I. 4.

Call. Adversum veniri mihi ad Philolachetem volo temperi. audi, em tibi imperatum est.

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Phil. (hurt) Why do you throw that at me?

Philol. I throw it at you? When I long to have it thrown up to my own self? Why, I've not made such a fine investment anywhere for many a day.

Phil. (happily) And I'm sure I couldn't do anything better with my love than give it to you, dear.

Philol. Then our books balance perfectly—you love me, and I love you, and both of us think that's just as it should be. (looking, rapt, to heaven) And may those who rejoice with us rejoice forever at their own unending joys. And those who envy us—may absolutely no one ever envy them for their blessings.

Phil. (drawing him to a couch) Come, then, take your place. (to a slave within) Some water for our hands, boy! Put a small table here. And the dice—look for them. (to Philolaches) Would you like some perfume?

Philol. (his arm around her on the couch) What for? With essence of myrrh beside me!

ENTER SLAVE WITH TABLE, ETC.

(looking down the street) Is that my chum, though, rolling up here with his mistress? It is. It's Callidamates, and that's his mistress with him. Hurray, dearest! Look! The regiment's assembling! Our pals are coming for part of the plunder!

Scene 4. ENTER Callidamates, VERY DRUNK, WITH Delphium
AND A SLAVE.

- Tr. Done for !
- Philol. How so ?
- Tr. Your father's here !
- Philol. (in a panic) What's that you say ?
- Tr. We're dead and buried ! Your father's come, I tell you.
- Philol. Where is he, for heaven's sake ?
- Tr. Here !
- Philol. Who says so ? Who saw him ?
- Tr. I did, I saw him myself, I tell you.
- Philol. (desperately) Now where am I ?
- Tr. Well, why the devil are you asking me where you are ? You're on that couch.
- Philol. You saw him your very self ?
- Tr. I myself, yes.
- Philol. You're positive ?
- Tr. (his contempt and masterfulness rising rapidly) Yes, positive.
- Philol. It's all up with me, if you're telling the truth !
- Tr. What should I gain by lying ?
- Philol. (helplessly) What shall I do now ?
- Tr. Have all this truck (with a wave at the party generally) cleared off. Who's that asleep there ?
- Philol. Callidamates.
- Tr. Wake him up, Delphium.
- Del. (prodding him) Callidamates ! Callidamates ! Wake up !

Tr. Hush, hush! I'm the man to think you up a sedative for all this. Will you be satisfied, if I fix it so that when your father arrives, he'll not only keep out of the house, but take to his heels out of its neighbourhood, too? (to slaves) Inside with you fellows now, yes, and clear away this stuff (indicating the table, etc.), and be quick about it!

Philol. Where shall I be?

Tr. Where you like best to be—with this girl, with that one.

Del. Suppose we go away from here, then?

Tr. (confidently) Not an inch, Delphium! No, and you're not to drink a drop the less inside there because of this.

Philol. Oh dear! I'm all ■ sweat from fear what this smooth talk of yours will end in!

Tr. (sternly) Can't you keep cool and do what I tell you?

Philol. (cowed) Yes, yes!

Tr. First of all, Philematium, you go inside, and you, too, Delphium.

Del. (going) We'll do anything you like, both of us.

[EXEUNT.]

Tr. I hope to heaven you will! (to Philolaches, who is gazing anxiously down the street) Here, you! Your attention at once, while I tell you what I want seen to! In the first place, now, have the house all shut up. And mind you don't let anyone breathe a word inside.

Philol. (shuddering) Anything . . . else?

Tr. (thinking) The front door key¹—have that brought out to me directly. I intend to lock the house up from the outside.

Philol. (forlornly) I'm putting myself and my hopes in your hands, Tranio!

Tr. (complacent) It doesn't matter a feather's-weight whether it's patron or client who's the better man. Why, a fellow without a bit of nerve in his chest² can make a mess of things easily enough, on the shortest notice. But it takes a mighty smart man to see to it that all the mess that's planned and perpetrated turns out nicely, without landing him in such trouble that he's sorry he's alive. And that's what I'll do—fix it so that all the storm we've raised here will absolutely clear away and quiet down, without bringing us a bit of discomfort.

ENTER A SLAVE FROM THE HOUSE.

Slave But what are you coming out for, Sphaerio?

Tr. (showing a key) You'll soon—

Slave (grandly) Very good! You have obeyed orders. He told me to beg you my very best to frighten his father away somehow from coming in upon him.

Tr. Well now, you just tell him this—that I shall see to it he does not dare give that dwelling so much as a glance, but cover his head and take to his heels in an awful funk. Come, the key! (takes it)

THE HAUNTED HOUSE .

Tr. (aside, seeing him) Oh, my Lord! I'm in a most everlasting mess now, and no mistake! There's the moneylender that let ■ have the cash to buy the girl and run the house with! Everything's out, unless I get the start and hit on some way of keeping the old man in the dark. I'll go meet the fellow. (glancing down the street in the opposite direction and seeing Theopropides) But what on earth is he coming home so soon for? I'm afraid he's got wind of this! I'll up and at him! (going to meet him) But, oh dear, I am in an awful funk! There's nothing more awful than ■ guilty conscience—and mine does bother me! Well, no matter what's up, I'll keep on complicating things. That's what the case demands.

ENTER Theopropides.

Where have you been, sir?

Th. (scrutinizing him) ■ have met the man I bought this house from.

Tr. You didn't tell him anything about what I told you, sir?

Th. Indeed ■ did, by Jove,—everything.

Tr. (in ■ low tone) Oh dear, this is the very devil! I'm afraid my scheme has gone to smash everlastingly!

Th. What are you saying to yourself?

Tr. (hurriedly) Why, nothing. But tell me, sir, did you tell him, really?

Th. I did, I say—everything from beginning to end.

Tr. And he confesses about the guest, eh?

Th. He does not. He denies it utterly.

Tr. The villain denies it?

Th. Denies it up and down; ■ say.

Tr. Think again, sir! Doesn't he admit it?

THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Th. I should tell you, if he did. What do you think should be done now?

Tr. (indignant) What do I think! For God's sake, sir, get some arbitrator, you and he! (aside) But see you get one who will take my word, (aloud) and you'll win as easily as a fox eats a pear.

Mis. (seeing him) Aha! There's Philolaches' servant, Tranio! Neither principal nor interest do I get from those two!

Th. (as Tranio edges toward Misargyrides) Whither away?

Tr. (stopping) Oh, nowhither. (aside) Lord! but I'm an unlucky rascal! It was an evil star I was born under! He'll catch me now while the old man's here! Lord! but I am an unlucky chap—the way they're hounding me right and left! But I'll board him first. (advances toward Misargyrides)

Mis. (aside, pleased) He's coming up to me! Saved! I have hopes of my money.

Tr. (aside) See him grin! He's fooling himself. (aloud) A very good day to you, Misargyrides.

Mis. Good day! How about the money?

Tr. Kindly get out, you beast! The minute I get in range, you open fire on me!

Mis. (disappointedly, seeing no sign of a wallet) There's nothing in this fellow.

Tr. There's second sight in this fellow, that is sure.

Mis. Come, drop that chaffing, will you?

Tr. Come, tell me what you want.

Mis. Where is Philolaches?

Tr. (confidentially) You could not have turned up at a better time than this. (tries to lead him further away from Theopropides)

Tr. No, no! Go on home! I'm telling you the truth. I swear I am! Only do go away!
Mis. See here, you pay me my interest! Why all this trifling?
Tr. (sarcastically) Splendid, by Jove! You certainly —(pleadingly) do go away now, do listen to me!
Mis. (hawling) By Jove, I'll denounce him publicly this minute!

You are not afraid he will leave the country, are you, all because of your interest, when you can have the principal at once?

Mis. I'm not after the principal, I tell you! You've got to pay me that interest first!

Tr. Don't bother me. No one will pay you, do what you like. You are the only moneylender alive, I suppose!

Mis. My interest! Give me my interest! Give me my interest, you two! Are you going to pay me my interest this minute? Am I to get my interest?

Tr. Interest, interest everywhere! Upon my soul, the only word he knows is "interest!" Off with you! I do believe I never saw a more disgusting beast than you.

Mis. You don't scare me off now with talk like that, not on your life!

Th. (who has been surveying them, aside) This is pretty hot! I'm getting well singed, even at this distance. (advances, calling to Tranio) What on earth is that interest the fellow's after?

Tr. (to Misargyrides, hurriedly) See! There's his father, just back from abroad! He'll pay you your interest and principal, both. (attempting to push him off) Don't try to make any more trouble for us. Just see if he puts you off.

Mis. (holding his ground) Well, if anything is paid me, I'll just take it along.

Th. (coming up, to Tranio) Answer me!

Tr. (aside) Get hanged to-morrow! I hope to heaven he does, the way he all but sent my plans to pot! By gad, you can't find a more disgusting, or less honourable, class of men than these moneylenders!

Th. Whereabouts is the house my son bought?

Tr. (aside) Aha! Here I am, floored!

Th. Are you going to answer me?

Tr. I will, sir. But . . . I'm trying to get hold of the owner's name.

Th. Come on, then, think of it.

Tr. (aside) Now what shall I do—unless I pass it off on our next door neighbour here, and say his name bought this house? By Jove, the best kind of lie, so I've heard, is a red hot one. Here goes! I'll give him whatever the gods give me to say!

Th. Well now? Have you thought of it yet?

Tr. The devil take that fellow! (aside) Or, better, this fellow! (aloud) It's your next door neighbour's house here that your son bought, sir.

Th. Honestly?

Tr. Why, yes, honestly, if you pay the bill, but not if you don't, sir. But didn't he buy in a jolly fine quarter, sir?

Th. "Fine?" The very best! Bless my soul, I'm eager to look over this house! Come, knock at the door and call someone out, Tranio.

Tr. (aside) Aha! Here I am, floored again! Now I don't know what to say! Driven up again against the same old rock! What now? By gad, what I'm to do now I can't imagine! I'm caught in the act!

Th. Come, quick! Call someone out and ask him to take us round. (advances toward house)

Si. You know now what I mean. (approvingly and receptively) That's the way! Be good to yourself! Yes, and reflect how short life is.

Tr. What? No! I didn't quite understand you—these doings of ours, you mean.

Si. I tell you! That's ■ life in the elegant style, just what it should be! With your wining and dining . . . fancy food . . . choice fish . . . ah, that's living!

Tr. That was living, you should say, sir. That's all over for us, now, everything at once.

Si. Why, how's that?

Tr. We're a total wreck, Simo, the whole lot of us.

Si. Don't talk like that! Everything has been going smoothly for you all this time.

Tr. Quite right—I'm not denying that. We've certainly had the tiptop life we wanted. But how the wind has failed our ship now, Simo!

Si. What do you mean? In what way?

Tr. The very worst!

Si. A ship that was hauled up safe on shore?

Tr. Ugh!

Si. What's wrong?

Tr. Lord help me! I am a wrecked man!

Si. How so?

Tr. Because ■ ship has come to ram our craft.

Si. Sincere sympathy, Tranio! But what's the trouble?

Tr. This—master's back from abroad.

Si. (coldly) Then that portends for you, first, a

Tr. (embracing Simo's legs) By your knees, sir, I beg you, don't give me away to master!

Si. He shall learn nothing from me, never you fear.

Tr. Oh, my protector!

Si. No protégés of your sort for me!

Tr. Now, sir, the matter our old master sent me to you about——

Si. Answer me this question first—has your old master got any inkling of those antics?

Tr. Not a glimmer, sir.

Si. He hasn't given his son a blowing up?

Tr. He's serene as any summer's day, sir. And just now he told me to ask you most urgently to allow him to inspect this house of yours.

Si. (surprised) It is not for sale.

Tr. Oh yes, sir, I know that. But the old fellow wants to build women's apartments on to his own house here, and baths, and a walk, and a portico.

Si. Well, what sort of a dream has he had?

Tr. It's this way, sir. He wants to get his son married as soon as possible. That's why he wants new women's apartments. And he says some architect or other has praised your house to him as being awfully well built. So now he wants to take it for a model, if you don't mind. He's all the keener, you see, sir, for taking it as a model because he has heard you're so wonderfully shaded there during the dry summer weather, all day long.

Si. Bless my soul! But the fact is that when it's shady everywhere else, the sun is always here, just the same, from morning till night, all the time. It's forever right at my door, just like a

Tr. (grinning) Ah then, if you're out of shadows, he about a fat¹ lady?

Si. Don't be impertinent! It's just as I tell you.

Tr. But he wants to inspect it, just the same, sir.

Si. Let him, if he likes. If there's anything it suits him, he can use my house for a model build away.

Tr. Shall I go and call him here, sir?

Si. Go call him.

Tr. (aside, approaching Theopropides) They say the Alexander and Agathocles² were a pair that a mighty big things. How about myself, for a third, with the immortal deeds I'm doing, single-handed? This old chap (indicating Simo) is carrying a pack, and this other one (indicating Theopropides, who is still admiring the house) is carrying another. A new line, this, I've organized, and it's not half bad—why, your mule drivers have their pack mules, but I have pack men! And how you can load 'em! They carry anything you stuff 'em with! (aside, seeing Theopropides is still rapt) I wonder if I ought to have a word with him now. Yes, I'll have at him! (aloud) I say, Theopropides! Eh? Who's that calling me?

Tr. A slave devoted to his master, body and soul, sir.

Th. Where have you been?

Tr. That matter you sent me about, sir—I got him to agree to it, all right.

Th. Why were you away so long there, for heaven's sake?

Tr. The gentleman was not at leisure, sir, and I waited till he was!

Th. You have your same old habit—always late
